Millions Vow To Make Jobs

BRRR! IT COULD HAPPEN HERE . . .

Victoria may be in for its first snowfall this weekend. A cold air front, which has already brought inches of snow to the interior of the province, is heading for the city.

If it reaches here this evening we'll probably have mixed rain and snow, if it comes in the early hours Sunday morning Victorians may wake up to snow.

A new cold record was set this morning as the mercury at the airport dipped to 26 degrees, one degree lower than the old record set on Dec. 2, 1954.

Snow also hit parts of eastern Canada Friday. Nearly three inches fell in Montreal and even this snowy statue of Sir Wilfrid Laurier (right) in a downtown park there seems to shiver with cold.

Australia Voters Go Labor

CANBERRA (CP) — The Labor party was swept to power in the Australian general election today, ending the 23-year-old government of the Liberal-County party coalition.

Prime Minister William McMahon conceded defeat to the Labor party led by Gough Whitlam.

In Sydney, a sniper armed with an air rifled opened fire outside a suburban polling booth and hit four persons, including the daughter of the speaker of the House of Representatives.

Police said about 12 shots were fired but no one was seriously hurt.

Margaret Aston, 21-year-old daughter of Speaker Sir William Aston, and two other women were hit in the legs by air gun pellets. A man was hit in the ear.

At his party headquarters, Whitlam, 56, hugged his wife Margaret and shouted to 300 supporters: "It was time."

Labor's campaign was pegged to the slogan, "It's Time" for a change.

With 27 seats undecided, computers gave the Labor party the necessary 63 seats to form a government in the 125-seat House of Representatives.

In the outgoing House, the coalition held 66 seats to Labor's 59.

In the shattering rebuff by Australia's seven million voters to his coalition, McMahon, prime minister for only 20 months, was himself in danger of losing his seat in the Sydney district of Lowe to Labor's Bill Fisher.

At least five other government ministers were trailing their Labor opponents and another, Navy Minister Malcolm McKay, has conceded defeat.

If McMahon is defeated he will be the second Australian prime minister to lose his seat in an election.

NEWS BRIEFS

Sell-Off Trims Canadian Dollar

TORONTO (CP) — The floating Canadian dollar levelled off Friday at near par with the U.S. dollar after a fairly heavy sell-off Thursday. It settled at about 100.50 cents U.S., down from 101.25 a week earlier. One Toronto money market dealer said the latest burst in dollar trading is "perhaps the most hectic I've ever seen."

21 Die at Sea

JAKARTA (AP) — Twenty-one persons were killed, 80 were missing and 186 were injured seriously after two ships collided in bad weather off the Celebes in the Java Sea last week, reports reaching here today said.

Final Briefing

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon and his top security adviser, Henry Kissinger, held "extensive consultations" today prior to Kissinger's Sunday departure to resume Vietnam peace talks in Paris.

Gales Lash U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Gales and torrential rain lashed southern England today, flooding towns and villages and endangering ships around the coasts. Southwestern England bore the brunt of the storm. The villages of East Budleigh and Sidmouth in Devon were evacuated and families used boats to move from flooded homes in Midsomer Norton, near the port of Bristol, when the River Somer burst its banks.

Arab Talks Invaded

PARIS (Reuter) — A dozen masked and armed youths burst into an internatonal pro-Arab conference here today, smashed equipment and injured delegates. The youths, who yelled "Israel will win," carried wooden clubs, iron bars and broken bottles, eyewitnesses said.

REGINA (CP) — A job-making program costing more than a third of a billion dollars was heralded Friday by Prime Minister Trudeau with other measures in a speech combining apologies for past omissions and determination to do better.

"Judge us by our actions in the coming weeks and months," Trudeau told a Saskatchewan Liberal Association dinner audience billed as numbering more than 1,500.

Trudeau said there were justified complaints about freeloading on the welfare system. Some measures to tighten the unemployment insurance scheme had been announced and there would be more.

The government in its new system installed Jan. 1 probably acted too quickly in its desire to make the Canadian system the best in the world, particularly for workers facing changing technology.

"We will not betray the Liberal idea of social justice but it will not be destroyed by abuse," Trudeau said.

The regional economic expansion program had been criticized and there had been mistakes in application by a new department spending $900 million for development of poorer areas.

"We don't apologize for the idea," Trudau said. "We do admit some mistakes." New policies and programs would be presented to Parliament when it opens Jan. 4. But it was a matter of regret that programs to aid poorer areas had been attacked "for reasons which would make Canadians ashamed."

The government should have done more during the election campaign to offset widespread attacks on the system, particularly references to Quebec getting the lion's share. Figures showed that the department of regional economic expansion on a per-capita basis from its inception in 1969 through 1972 had paid Newfoundland $249, Prince Edward Island $389, Nova Scotia $141, New Brunswick $218, Manitoba $51 and Saskatchewan $55, compared to only $36 for Quebec.

There had also been indignation expressed about laxity in administering the immigration policy, said Trudeau, and without resorting to discrimination based on color, creed or race further steps would be announced shortly to tighten the regulations.

Devastation marks heart of Dublin

Bombs Push Dublin Into Anti-IRA Law

Times News Services

DUBLIN — Two bombs exploded in the heart of Dublin Friday night, killing two persons, wounding 50 and abruptly ending the political crisis that had threatened Premier Jack Lynch's government.

The bombs, both left in cars, went off within 20 minutes of each other near O'Connell Street, the capital's main artery. The first exploded outside Liberty Hall, a popular meeting place on a bank of the Liffey, and accounted for one of the deaths. The other blew up in Sackville Street behind a department store and killed a man in a nearby office.

The explosions, less than 200 yards apart, shattered buildings and showered passersby with glass and brick. Some of the 50 injured were reported to be in serious condition.

The car bombs exploded at the very moment that the Dail, the Irish parliament, was winding up a tense debate on a Lynch bill to give the government sweeping powers against the Irish Republican Army.

The measure had been bitterly fought as "repressive" by the two opposition parties and they had counted enough votes to defeat it. If they had been right, Lynch would have dissolved the parliament and called for a general election.

But the bombs changed all that. Just before 10 p.m., about 90 minutes after the second explosion, Deputy Patrick Cooney, a leader of the opposition Fine Gael Party, rose to his feet in the packed and hushed chamber.

Cooney deplored "the tragic event which has overtaken parliament." If the opposition persisted, he said, "it might have the effect of plunging the country into a political crisis . . . more turmoil."

So, he said, Fine Gael was withdrawing its amendment to kill the meauure, clearing the way for its rapid passage through the Dail.

ILWU, Employers Await Mediator

VANCOUVER (CP) — Both the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and British Columbian's maritime employers are waiting for word from Ottawa on possible appointment of a federal government mediator to speed up contract talks.

The employers asked for the mediator earlier this week because the talks were going too slowly, and the union broke off the talks to assess its position.

Ed Strang, chief negotiator for the employers, said a proposal for computer dispatching of longshoremen to dock jobs and amendment of a clause covering container cargo loading were two major items still outstanding.

"We haven't even talked money", he said.

Don Garcia, area president for the ILWU, agreed and said hours of work was also an important issue.

The longshoremen are working under back-to-work legislatian passed by parliament earlier this year to halt an earlier work stoppage. The legislation runs out at the end of the year.

"Our interpretation of certain clauses is that we can go on strike at midnight Dec. 31", Mr. Garcia said, but added that there are other clauses on which the union will have to get a ruling before any strike is called.

The ILWU and eight other unions, meanwhile, have formed the Pacific Maritime Council. Mr. Garcia, whose 44,000 members form the largest component of the new group, said it is hoped that the council will eventually lead to "one union in the waterfront industry."

He said the council hopes eventually to have 10,000 members. Besides the ILWU, other unions joining were the B.C. Ferry Workers Union, the Boilermakers and Marine Workers Industrial Union, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, Local 400, Seafarers International Union, International Woodworkers of America, United Brotherhood of Carpenters, Joiners and Shipwrights, Metal Trades Council and the tugboat men belonging to the Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

Buy-or-Move: Williams

VANCOUVER (CP) — Resources Minister Bob Williams was involved earlier this year in an apartment-conversion plan in which tenants were told to purchase their suites or move out, the New Democratic MLA confirmed today.

Williams was a partner in the purchase of six rental units in a city apartment block. He was an MLA when the purchase took place.

The spreading practice of converting apartment buildings into condominiums has come in for criticism recently, with Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer suggesting recently that the government will step in to regulate the conversions unless the developers do so themselves.

Lorimer, who acted as Williams' lawyer during the purchase of the suites, registered on Jan. 29 of this year, has said the government may introduce legislative amendments to block the conversions.

Williams said Lorimer acted solely as his solicitor in the purchase and had no other interest in the transaction.

The six suites were purchased by Williams and his partners—his mother, Mrs. Margaret Williams, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Noella Ringuette—for $77,000. They were sold individually for a total of $127,800 by April 25.

Williams said he had spent a lot of money in repairing and renovating the units and estimated he had spent "tens of thousands of dollars" on fixing them.

He said people were given a good chance to either buy the suites or move to other accommodation and none were evicted.

"We're very proud of it, but I wouldn't do it again," he said.

"It cost a lot."

Man. Prosecutors Eye Own Union

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Free Press today said Manitoba's 23 crown prosecutors, along with other legal officers of the provincial government, have withdrawn from the provincial civil service and are attempting to form their own union.

In the front page story, the paper said the prosecutors and legal officers are expected to submit an application for certification to the provincial labor board early in 1973.

Attorney General Al Mackling confirmed there is a move afoot by the prosecutors to form their own union but Labor Minister A. R. Paulley says it is impossible.

Paulley said that under the terms of the Civil Service Act any group can withdraw from the Manitoba Government Employees Association, the official bargaining agent for civil servants.

However, he said, "there is no provision for the legal officers to form themseves into a separate bargaining unit."

He said the Manitoba Labor Relations Act, which comes into effect Jan. 1, 1973 and will make it easier for workers to unionize, does not cover members of the civil service.

"In effect, what has happened is that they have withdrawn from the Manitoba Government Employees Association and have left themselves in a vacuum. They're at the suffrance now of cabinet, as far as any negotiations are concerned.

"They have no legal representation under the Civil Service Act . . . they haven't got any power now."

Region Post Escapes Jubenville

Jubenville

Weldon Jubenville, the fiery former president of the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America, has lost in his attempt to become regional secretary-treasurer of the union.

"What the results of this election mean is that there will be no change in our regional council in the next two years," the 53-year-old former faller commented today.

"I don't like to see the best union in the world, the I.W.A., stand still for that long, because the way things are that means going backwards."

Jubenville said he will depart to "a warmer climate" for a month then make up his mind what to do. "I'm not planning to go back to work in a camp, but I haven't ruled out any possibility."

Results of the regional election, released Friday, show Jubenville polled 11,670 votes — but incumbent Fred Fieber, who is nearing retirement age, got 12,549 votes.

Jubenville had joined regional president Jack Moore's slate in the election, while Fieber was dumped and joined a challenging rank and file slate.

In other results, Moore polled 14,815 votes to top challenger Don Poirier who got 10,017.

Moore's slate took the first and second vice-presidencies Jack Munro (14,498) topping former Victorian Joe Fowler (9,834) and Wyman Trineer (13,190) beating Cy Godfrey (10,859).

Third vice-president Stan Parker (12,900) edged challenger Ben Thompson (11,231) of the rank and file slate.

In addition to Fieber's victory, the challenging slate also defeated Ed Haw of Victoria for the post of trustee. Haw, former long-time financial secretary of the Victoria IWA local, got 10,928 votes — but Erik Wood of the Haney local polled 13,061.

COLE BAY FIRE KILLS 2 TOTS

Two children, aged one and four years, died early this morning in a fire that gutted their parents' North Saanich home.

Pauline Tom, 1, and Sandra Tom, 4, died in the 1 a.m. blaze at 996 Paquachin Lane on the Cole Bay Indian reservation.

The two girls were found in a bedroom of the wooden frame bungalow-type home. Their six-year-old brother, Harold, had escapd by jumping from the window of his own bedroom.

The childrens' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tom escaped uninjured.

An inquiry into the children's death will be held today under coroner Gordon A. Gerrie in Sidney.

Parents 90% Behind Principal

Parent response to a letter protesting transfer of Willows School principal Tom Curteis was "around 90 per cent in favor", Parent-Teacher Association president Robert Gray said today.

With this support, the PTA will send the protest letter to Greater Victoria school board trustees this afternoon.

The letter, which asks the board to reconsider the application of its transfer policy to principals who plan to retire within four years, was circulated among Willows parents Thursday.

Gray said 439 replies were received Friday: 404 in favor of sending the letter, 34 against and 1 undecided.

Gray explained that he didn't know how many replies were possible since, while there are 717 students in the school, many families have more than one child.

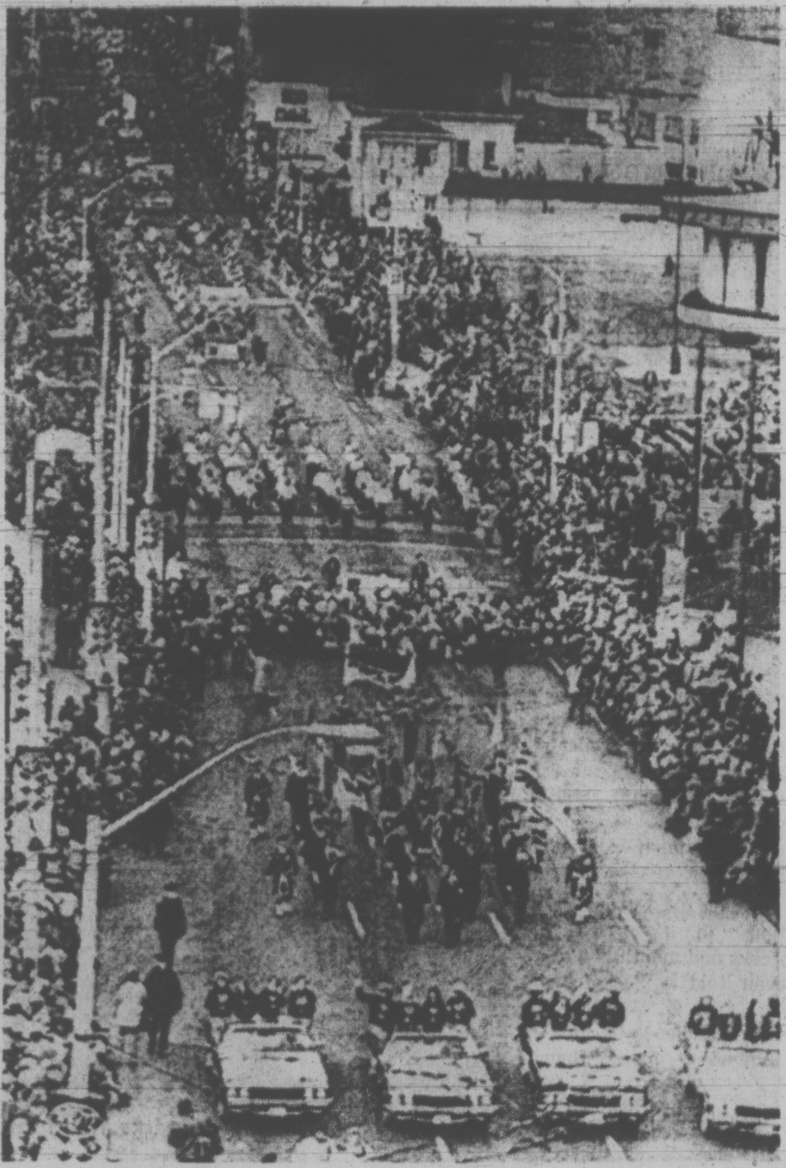
Curteis's transfer, scheduled for next September is in line with school board policy of transferring principals every five years.

Curteis is appealing the decision because he plans to retire in three years.

Hal Knight, chairman of the school board, said Friday the board had no guarantee that Curteis would retire in three years since he is allowed by law to stay eight more years.

Knight said the board would re-consider the matter if a majority of parents were protesting the move.

A hearing on Curteis's appeal is scheduled for next week.



GREY CUP FEVER was at a high pitch in Hamilton today with an estimated 250,000 people watching the parade winding its way through the city. The game itself will be played at 10 a.m. Sunday with both national television networks providing coverage.

'Circumstances' Hiked UIC Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras says the government's failure to forecast the record cost of the unemployment insurance program was due to "some extraordinary combinations of circumstance."

Mr. Andras refused to blame his predecessor, Bryce Mackasey, for the situation. He said the program was a "bold, imaginative, radical change" from previous unemployment insurance plans.

"I give him (Mr. Mackasey) a great deal of credit for the scheme which I think is basically a very good scheme, and when we work the bugs out of it I think Canada will be the better for it."

Mr. Andras' comments came on the CTV television network program Question Period which was taped for broadcast Sunday. A text of the interview was released to the press in advance.

Mr. Andras had announced before the interview that the final benefit costs of the UIC program will be "very close" to $1.9 billion, the bulk of which will be met by employer-employee contributions. The federal treasury's share will be about $890 million.

The extraordinary circumstances which led the UIC to miscalculate the costs included "a radical change in policy, a rather substantial change in administrative process, the introducing of computers, and a whole bunch of things like that, at a time when unemployment was very high, so the volume of applications was very large," Mr. Andras said.

In many cases UIC officials had to decide on a case within 10 minutes just to keep up with the flow of applications, Mr. Andras said.

"They were swamped and this has cost us probably a great deal of wasted money."

Things are being "tidied" up, Mr. Andras said, but he warned that, given the nature of the program, it will still be difficult in the future to forecast costs accurately.

POLICEMAN REMANDED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Constable Brian Honeybourn, 26, was remanded Friday to Dec. 13 on a charge of criminal negligence in the fatal shooting Tuesday of Danny Teecé, 17.

The youth was shot while police were attempting to apprehend four youths who fled on foot from a car under police surveillance in the city's east end.

Prosecutor Stewart McMorran said an autopsy showed the bullet went through the youth's arm, shoulder and into his neck.

The last was B. M. Bruce who lost the Victorian seat of Fliners in 1929.

Former prime minister John Gorton and cabinet minister Don Chipp described the result as an "outstanding victory for Labor."

Gorton said: "The voters obviously thought that 23 years was long enough for one group to be in power. The government did not grasp the nettle."

Chip said: "We lost the election when we squabbled amongst ourselves."

The Labor victory in Australia came one week after Norman Kirk's Labor party scored a landslide win in New Zealand's general election.

A record 535 candidates from 15 parties ran in the election for three-year terms.

The election campaign has spotlighted domestic issues such as health services, education, housing and abortion, with defence and foreign affairs playing a small role.

Trudeau spoke before departing for London and talks with Prime Minister Edward Heath and a meeting with the Queen.

His address followed conversations lasting almost three hours with the leaders of the four western Liberal parties where agreement was reached to attempt to improve federal-provincial communications starting with a Western Canada Liberal policy conference in Winnipeg, perhaps in March. Trudeau will try to be present.

The last such meeting was held in Edmonton in 1970.

On arrival in London, Trudeau was met at the airport by British Defence Secretary Lord Carrington.

His talks with Heath are expected to range over the entire field of Anglo-Canadian relations prior to Britain's an Common Market.

Trade matters likely will be of foremost concern to the two prime ministers, although senior officials here do not believe Canada is planning any swift counter-action when Britain abrogates its long-Jan. 1 entry into the Europe-standing Canadian trade agreements to conform with Common Market policies.

Trudeau was to meet Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith, a former Canadian diplomat, later today and see the rock musical Godspell at a London theatre tonight. Meetings also were scheduled with senior Canadian trade officials today.

Trudeau is to leave London for Heath's country resident of Chequers early Sunday for a full day of talks and dinner Sunday night.

. . . IRELAND

The disputed measure rests on the fact that membership in the IRA has been illegal here since 1939. But the government contended that proof of membership, even for the most notorious members, has been difficult to obtain.

The new bill enables a court to accept as evidence the sworn "belief" of a ranking police officer that an accused is a member of the proscribed group.

Civil libertarians in both Fine Gael and the smaller Labor Party had argued that his shifted the burden of proof from the state to a defendant.

But Justice Minister O'Malley had contended that court would still have to weigh the police officer's credibility, and, anyway, the sworn belief of a senior officer makes it "virtually certain that the accused was indeed a member."

Meanwhile, in Belfast, troops searching a vacant apartment today found four boys between 12 and 14 being taught how to make and use nail bombs by a 14-year-old boy.

In another part of the city, the naked body of a man between 26 and 30 years old was found in a back street with burns on his hands and feet and the letters IRA branded on his back.

Police said he had been "severely tortured," but there was no apparent motive for his killing. The man had been beaten first, then shot dead.

"From the marks on his wrists it will appear that at some time his hands had been tied," a police spokesman said. "It was a ghastly crime.

B.C. Asked to Pay

SURREY (CP) — The provincial government has been asked to reimburse Surrey for costs of pumping and clean-up resulting from a break last week in a Mud Bay dike, Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said Friday. The mayor estimated costs at $30,000 and said the municipality should be reimbursed in full, but added that the government seems only willing to pay part of the costs.

FIRE TRAPS CHILDREN

SEOUL (UPI) — One of the worst fires in South Korea's history ravaged a downtown theatre today trapping and killing young women and children watching a weekend musical special.

Police said at least 34 persons perished and 87 others were injured in the blaze that swept through the citizens hall auditorium in downtown Seoul in less than 20 minutes.

The two-storey structure was engulfed in flames and a number of theatre-goers leaped from windows trying to escape. Helicopters hovered over the burning building in the hope of rescuing any stranded victims. But the main roof of the buiding collapsed at the height of the blaze.

Most of the city's firefighting equipment was pressed into service to battle the blaze and it was brought under control a half hour after it was reported. The fire erupted near the end of a performance by 10 of South Korea's most famous singing personalities.

HEARING AIDS MANUFACTURED IN VICTORIA

Victoria: For the past four years a Victoria company, Audiotronics, has been manufacturing hearing aids. Their most recently developed hearing aid covers a much wider range of sound than previously attainable, permitting the wearer to hear with comfort on the street, or in noisy surroundings. The fact that Audiotronics retail directly to the public, a substantial saving is realized by the hard of hearing.

Audiotronics is located at 660 Fort Street at Broad.

Finlayson Extension Delayed

Completion of Finlayson Street extension is doubtful for at least another year due to ground conditions and a slackening of priority for the project.

Proposed as a joint undertaking by Victoria and Saanich to relieve traffic pressure on Cedar Hill Cross Road and Hillside east-west routes, the scheme was downgraded in the fall by Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

The Saanich share of the project, still to be negotiated with the city, does not appear in any current or future schedule of municipal road improvements. Municipal engineer Bob Daye agreed the project has low priority in Saanich.

He noted a proposed municipal local improvement initiative to rebuild North Dairy Road as an easterly extension of Finlayson had been dropped by Saanich because anticipated costs were too high to expect property owners fronting the street to share.

In June it had been anticipated by assistant city engineer William Jorgenson that Finlayson and North Dairy improvements would permit use of the new access by the end of the year.

Now, according to traffic engineering department, completion of the new section between Cook and Cedar Hill Road is not anticipated before mid-1973.

This section is within Victoria jurisdiction while the next phase, east of Cedar Hill to Doncaster involves the Saanich boundary as would a further section east to Shakespeare.

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich suggested that since Victoria traffic would be the chief beneficiary of the completed link, the city should share some its tax revenue from Hillside shopping centre which would be directly served.

Completion of all phases will provide a traffic artery from Gorge Road past Mayfair shopping centre, intersecting Burnside, Douglas, Blanshard, Quadra, Cook, Cedar Hill Road and Doncaster, past Hillside shopping centre to Shelbourne.

The city traffic department said rough grade has been established between Cook and Cedar Hill and time must be permitted to allow proper settling of the heavy fill.

Traffic will not be allowed on the Finlayson extension until after a base coat of asphalt is applied, probably in the spring of next year.

"We are faced with a situation where the principal generator of traffic is a large tax producer in the city of Victoria . . . It may come to the point where the city should consider sharing some of its tax revenue from Hillside in order to justify some of the expenditure of tax monies in Saanich to complete a road which is essentially a Victoria service road," Curtis said.

"It is the kind of boundary situation which does present problems," he added, noting previous agreements for reconstruction of Foul Bay and Gordon Head roads which are to mutual advantage.

Curtis said any formula worked out with the city for North Dairy improvement would have to be "fully cognizant" of the greater service to Victoria traffic.

Ambulance Service Labelled Adequate

Para-medical type ambulance service should not be established in Esquimalt, according to a municipal council report due to be released shortly.

The existing emergency ambulance service provided by Esquimalt police is adequate, the report says, and extension to a full ambulance service would be costly and unwarranted.

Ald. Terry Prentice, member of the four-man committee set up to investigate an Esquimalt Police Union suggestion that the service be upgraded, said today an expanded system would cost $60,000 to $70,000 a year.

"The police can get any emergency call to hospital in four to five minutes," Prentice said.

"Residents can get general ambulance service from other sources," he added.

The police have three station wagons to rush patients to hospital.

Prentice said the report recommends the level of training for police personnel conducting the service be upgraded, at the discretion of Police Chief Earl Sarsiat.

He added that the report advised the municipality to buy one more stretcher so that each emergency vehicle has at least one.

Boys' Choir Founder Dies at Age 75

Funeral service for Frank Shandley of 614 Dallas Road, founder of the Victoria Rotary Boys' Choir, will be held Tuesday at 3 p.m. in the Church of Our Lord, Rt. Rev. Gordon Stacey officiating.

Shandley, 75, died suddenly Friday.

He had worked with the Arion Club choir as well as the Rotary Boys' Choir, which trained hundreds of young voices.

He was a member of Victoria Rotary Club for 48 years and was past president of the Bishop Cridge Centre for the Family.

Born in Victoria, Shandley joined the provincial finance department in 1917 as a junior clerk and retired in 1962 as provincial assessor.

As a young man, he played goal for the Victoria west Soccer Club. He also was a baseball coach.

Shandley is survived by his wife Lillian, his son Ralph and three grandchildren, all of Victoria, and by his brother, Dr. Fred Shandley of Seattle.

Introducing MINCOME. For those 65 or over.

MINCOME.
It means being able to afford a cribbage board.
A hot water bottle.
A flashlight.
Fresh fruit.
Whole wheat bread.
Maybe a radio.

For many of our senior citizens, it means the difference between hoping and having.

What is MINCOME?

MINCOME is short for Guaranteed Minimum Income Assistance.

It is important social legislation that has just been passed by the Provincial Government, which guarantees all residents of B.C. aged 65 or older, an income of at least $200.00 a month.

Guaranteed.

This program will not be found anywhere else in North America.

It is designed in British Columbia for British Columbians.

Who will receive it?

A person living in British Columbia aged 65 or older, eligible for the Federal Old Age Security and Guaranteed Income Supplement, will also be eligible for MINCOME.

How much do you receive?

If you are an eligible resident whose total income is now less than $200.00 a month, you will receive a MINCOME cheque to bring your income up to $200.00 a month. The amount of your MINCOME cheque will depend on your other income. For example, if you are 65 years of age or older and receive $25.00 from a pension plan, you will also be eligible to receive:

Your Old Age Security	$ 82.88
Your Guaranteed Income Supplement	+ 42.12
FOR TOTAL FEDERAL PAYMENTS	$125.00
Plus other pension payments	+ 25.00
TOTAL OTHER SOURCES	$150.00
THE BRITISH COLUMBIA GOVERNMENT GUARANTEED MINIMUM INCOME ASSISTANCE (MINCOME)	50.00
YOUR TOTAL GUARANTEED INCOME	= $200.00

The MINCOME supplement may vary from one person to another depending on the total amount of income from all other sources.

If you are a married couple, both 65 years of age or over, your combined income is considered, so that as a couple, if you both qualify, you would be assured a monthly income of $400.00.

We emphasize...

1. If you are living in British Columbia, 65 years of age or over and are receiving the Federal Old Age Security and the Federal Guaranteed Income Supplement, you automatically qualify for the extra money. You need not fill out any forms or make any enquiries.

2. To apply for the Federal supplement, write to:

Old Age Security Regional Office,
1230 Government Street,
Victoria, B.C.

3. If for any reason you change your address after December 1st please notify MINCOME at once.

The British Columbia Guaranteed Income Assistance (MINCOME) is unique in North America — a plan designed and developed especially for you — our over 65's.

The mailing address of the new plan will be:

MINCOME,
Parliament Buildings,
Victoria, B.C.

The Rescue Squad

At a rather late date the federal government announces that drastic changes will be made in the unemployment insurance program. The program has become a major target for critics of government policy, and its main defect appears to be that it stopped being an unemployment insurance plan and became a form of welfare.

Under pressure of unprecedented unemployment totals the government revised payments, time conditions and other factors to provide more direct assistance longer to more people. The costs quickly lost any practical relationship to the amount received in premiums or the amount which the general revenue coffers should be expected to carry.

Present estimates are that the cost of the program for 1972 will be over $2 billion. This cost will be met almost equally by employer-employee contributions and funds from the government. On such a basis the system is as much a welfare program as an insurance scheme. It is to a large extent a tax-supported system of grants to individuals.

Among the changes promised for the new year will be an increase in the contributions made by management and workers. Insofar as this constitutes a cost of business operation, it will eventually be handed along to consumers. And the proposal to increase the scope of the insurance plan by taking in a higher bracket of income earners could mean that many persons who run little risk of ever having to depend on unemployment insurance will have to contribute to the fund in any case.

The new Manpower minister, Mr. Andras, promises that careful attention will be given to the recipients of insurance payments. The plan is a generous one — a statement with which many will agree — and, as Mr. Andras says, there is no room in it for persons who should not qualify. Apart from some who no doubt benefit illegally, there are many who qualify under the regulations but who cannot really be termed persons who have earned unemployment insurance aid. A tightening up of regulations and categories, and consequently costs, will be a very good move. It will be more than good, it will be absolutely essential.

China from Ground Level

Not all visitors from North America to a re-opened China have been dignitaries, distinguished journalists or other notables. A few, and their number is expected to grow, are Chinese residents of this continent who have returned briefly to meet old personal friends, to see what is happening in the land of Mao and, no doubt, to convey to the Chinese something of the world outside.

These brief returns of the natives are encouraged by Chinese with a desire to show them how much the homeland has progressed, what it has accomplished under its new regime and, in a modest degree, to welcome tourists who do not cost the Chinese taxpayer anything in the way of accommodation or travel expenses — as do the more widely publicized visitors. The Chinese making the trip to China meet their own costs, usually stay with relatives or friends and are not accorded red carpet treatment.

But, as one observer notes, they enjoy a benefit denied the more illustrious tourists: they are not given the Cook's tour treatment. Living at ground level with their own kind, able to converse with them in their own tongue, they move unencumbered through the land and are in a position to form their own opinions uninfluenced by any pressure or propaganda from selected guides or interpreters.

When they come back to North American homes, their accounts should have a ring of authenticity that may be lacking in the reports of some distinguished guests of the country exposed, owing to language barriers for one thing, to the words of their translators and the official statements of policy and achievement by guides with a special interest in creating a good impression.

Making the Punishment . . .

Municipal and sports officials in Esquimalt have drawn public attention to a persistent and pernicious form of activity which is depriving many of the district's youngsters of the facilities they should enjoy in their various games. Vandals are continuing to destroy property—changing rooms and toilets among them—almost as regularly as it is repaired. In the Kinsmen Gorge Park alone taxpayers have had to meet a $2,000 bill for senseless destruction.

Short of psychiatric analysis, there is no accounting for the stupid behavior which defeats the efforts of honest citizens to give their parks, playgrounds and amenities the care and the equipment essential for general enjoyment. The wanton destruction is not, of course, limited to playgrounds. The school board, from time to time, reports damage requiring repairs that dip into the taxpayer's pocket. And the school board has adopted a policy of holding parents financially responsible for the costs inflicted on the public by their misbehaving offspring when caught.

It is not a simple matter to catch vandals at their work. But it might be an imaginative treatment to have those who are caught first charged for repairs and then required to clean up change rooms and toilets on their weekends. It might seem less smarty-alecky to smash things if the penalty required them to drop to their knees to scrub floors and porcelain in public places.

ART STOTT

Trouble We Can Avoid

According to the authorities, Indians form about one per cent, or a little more, of the Canadian population. Even a birth rate double the national average is not going to make them a numerically dominant force in this country in the foreseeable future.

Yet, says a friend of mine, back in town after several years in close contact with them, white Canadians have about 10 years in which to arrive at a mutually satisfactory association with our Indians or face serious trouble.

In his own experience he has noted the satisfaction shown by a few Indians in putting "Whitey" down. Increased animosity and militancy, he points out, could produce, in microcosm, a parallel to "Black Power."

Strengthened Assessment

His assessment of the potential for trouble is automatically strengthened in the mind of anyone who thinks back a few months to the international turmoil caused by a few sub-human Arabs murdering Israeli athletes at Munich, or, before that, a very small number of kidnappers and a murderer who shamed all Canadians in Quebec. Large numbers are not essential for the creation of great distress.

Yet my friend is not overwhelmed by pessimism. He has found hopeful avenues along which he believes all Canadians, Indians and non-Indians, can move toward the association he considers desirable in the country. While many speak of the progress education is making toward this goal, he deals with certain specifics.

They are specifics, incidentally, which could tone down the harsh lines of the picture Philip Paul drew the other day of Indian children in the stereotype of today's social climate. If the values of the majority white population were to prevail, Mr. Paul contended, most Indian children should be removed from their homes by social agencies because the homes, suffering depressed economic status, do not provide the environment white Canadians considered adequate for the children's development.

My friend, preserving his optimism, takes the different values into account. He does not condone sub-standard housing. Neither does he assume that good housing would be the cure-all.

In his opinion, a solution calls for restoration of the Indian's self-respect and confidence. The Indian, he says, has been downgraded for so many generations that he harbors an ingrained sense of inferiority. When the Indian does something praiseworthy, too many white people are inclined to say "Pretty good — for an Indian." When his activities fall below acceptable standards, the too general white reaction is: "What did you expect from an Indian?"

A Question of Values

My friend admits that this is part of the white prejudice, adds that all humans have prejudices and that the way to overcome their adverse effects begins by recognizing their existence.

He knows that many Indians are highly competent, can measure up to Canadian standards in a broad field of activity and invite no condescension.

Simple acknowledgement of that fact by non-Indians, without any qualification of race, would help restore dignity and confidence, he says.

Language and Roots

He comes back to the question of values and the means of respecting them. Eliminate a people's language, he argues, and you destroy its culture. Destroy its culture and you cut its roots.

Recognizing that argument, a number of schools in Canada, he points out, have been teaching young Indians in their own tongue, using native teachers where possible and native teachers' aides in other instances. The Indian languages, he knows — and so do the Indians — are not going to replace English in Canada. But their preservation as a means of communication serves both to protect traditions and to re-establish pride in heritage.

He'd like to see classes for young children in schools to which mature Indians would come, tell the stories of their people and sing their songs — classes in which students would be both Indian and non-Indian. That way, some elements of an old culture could be implanted in impressionable minds and perhaps lead to understandings of a lasting nature.

The Indian, says my friend, is inevitably caught in the tides of the century. So are we. Maybe, since we're more or less in the same boat, we ought to learn to row in unison. Less chance of disaster that way. With respect for each other, it might even turn out to be an enjoyable boat ride.

TOM WICKER

Was the Peace News Real?

No matter what happens after the Indochinese peace talks resume on Dec. 4, it now seems reasonably clear that Dr. Henry Kissinger had little basis for his statement on Oct. 26, 12 days before the election, that "Peace is at hand," subject only to a few minor details of negotiation. He had, it is clear, no real agreement with Hanoi and Saigon on ending the war; no such agreement seems to exist a month later; and it is highly questionable whether either Kissinger or President Nixon could have believed on Oct. 26 that they actually had reached an agreement that would bring what Nixon called that night in Ashland, Ky., "Peace with honor and not peace with surrender."

Quite obviously, there can be no cease-fire in South Vietnam until the Saigon government agrees to a cease-fire, for the simple reason that that government has in its army a million men, armed to the teeth by the United States. In the final analysis, the only way Washington can impose a cease-fire on that government and that army is by threatening to cut off their military supplies.

Viewed Against Record

Is that a serious proposition? After having for four years maintained the war, at a cost of 20,000 American deaths, billions of American dollars, and incalculable Indochinese casualties, all for the stated purpose of giving the Saigon regime a "chance" to survive, is it really conceivable that Nixon is now prepared to ask Congress to shut off military support to that regime — thus throwing an "ally" to the Communists, even though Nixon has said repeatedly that if he did that, a gigantic bloodbath would ensue and world peace would be threatened?

Yet, as recently as last weekend, President Thieu's controlled newspaper, Tin Song, said in Saigon that before there can be a ceasefire, North Vietnam must withdraw its troops from South Vietnam, the demilitarized zone — in effect, a national border — must be re-established at the 17th parallel, and the role of the National Council of Reconciliation and Concord — envisioned in the Kissinger-Le Duc Tho draft accord — must be more clearly defined.

These are merely the central issues of the war; if they have to be settled before Saigon agrees to a cease-fire, it follows that on Oct. 26 the Nixon Administration did not really have an agreement for a cease-fire that depended only on the working out of a few details.

As another example, Kissinger said that the release of American prisoners of war by Hanoi was not dependent on the release of political prisoners by Saigon. This seemed to be confirmed in a statement by Xuan Thuy, a principal North Vietnamese negotiator.

HENRY KISSINGER
. . . no complaint

Yet, since then, the North Vietnamese Communist newspaper, Nhan Dan, has asserted just the opposite view, and the North Vietnamese summary of the draft accord (with which Kissinger said he had "no complaint") declared that "The return of all captured and detained personnel of the parties shall be carried out simultaneously with the U.S. troops' withdrawal."

Since many political prisoners held by Saigon would be an important part of the so-called "third force" supposed to be included in the National Council of Reconciliation and Concord, is it realistic to suppose that Hanoi agreed to leave them to the mercy of Saigon? In any case, it is a legitimate question whether Kissinger was entitled to speak as specifically on the matter as he did on Oct. 26.

By far the major question concerns the status of North Vietnamese forces in South Vietnam. The summary of the draft accord with which Kissinger had "no complaint" on Oct. 26 does not mention a withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces; every commentator pointed out that this was a major American concession. Yet, Saigon patently is unwilling to accept this arrangement; and some informed government sources insist that Kissinger's failure to secure an agreement for North Vietnamese withdrawal caused Washington — not just Saigon — to pull back from accepting his draft accord with Le Duc Tho.

One-Sided Concession

To have accepted that draft, they say, would have given Hanoi what it had sought all along — an American withdrawal from the battlefield, while Hanoi was left free to settle Indochinese military and political affairs in direct and unimpeded struggle with Saigon.

Now it is being asserted in Washington, through studied leaks and calculated statements, that the American side is pressing for further concessions only in order to be able to tell Saigon honestly that further concessions cannot be had; even if that were true, however, it still implies that on Oct. 26 there was no real basis for asserting that only a few unimportant details stood in the way of a peace which was "at hand."

On that date, Kissinger — who was just back from Saigon — must have known that Thieu did not accept the most important parts of the draft accord. He could hardly have been justified in asserting, therefore, that only a few minor details remained to be worked out with Hanoi; and if it finally turns out that the central issue of the renewed negotiations is the withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces, the real question will be whether Nixon himself ever accepted the Kissinger-Le Duc Tho draft accord, which was supposed to have meant that peace was at hand.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

Do those who wander beside a stream or river listen to the music and the songs that running water makes?

Each has a different tune and a song that fits into the mood the water creates. It will sing a different song during the different seasons. Some are happy and cheerful, others will be sad and at times rather dreary.

So let's go to a tiny little rill high in the mountains where the river begins its life. Here, perhaps it is just the drip-drip from a snow pack or from some ice sheets. The tiny drops seem to say as they splash upon the stones, "now we are free again" and their music is one of joy. They tumble down the hillside and mingle with others from a different slope and here their song is of childhood, saying "we are on our way back to our original source."

As they meet and mix with other little streams the combined effort is one of impetuous youth, rushing and tumbling over the rocks, wearing the rock faces smooth and often tearing away the banks in their hurry. Maybe they drop from a cliff and become a waterfall and create a new song. It becomes a voice of thunder, the high roll of percussion drowning out the soft undertones.

As the streams, now mingled together, become a river they seem to grow weary and softly meander along the valley floor, just whispering their song. Here the waters have a job to fulfil. They become a flood plain and a water table that will enrich the flat lands, nourishing its foodstuffs and so enriching the life of all living things.

Perhaps, on their way down, the waters have spread out, forming deep pools that we call lakes and ponds surrounded by the lush green growth of the marsh lands. Here the waters give life to plants, to fish, insects and mammals, each forming a part of the world's environment and the great complex of the food chain.

Now the flowing waters reach the deltas and mouths of rivers, returning to the place from which they started on their wonderful journey. Here their songs of joy, freedom, restless youth and the quiet murmur of age will mingle and, in storm, will become the song of thunder as they beat upon the shore, awaiting their turn once again to go back to the clouds and their tumble down the mountainside.

Winter Sports

It is my pleasure to commend and applaud Premier Barrett's decision to give no financial aid to the proposed Olympic Winter Sports — a festival that can be enjoyed only by the financially fortunate minority, at the expense of the less fortunate majority.

Right, Mr. Premier, right indeed, when you say such enormous amounts of money entailed in such a proposal can be more humanely spent on hospitals and the general care of the sick and distressed. — W. B. White, 798 Lampson St.

CALIFORNIA

Where It All Happens First

By CHARLES FOLEY
The London Observer

LOS ANGELES—What is it that sets California apart from the rest of the United States? Why does it so often appear, in books and journals, to be almost another country, outside the American mainstream? We know, of course, that it is the most affluent, most populous, the freakiest state in the union, but wherein lies its uniqueness?

Neal R. Peirce, author and political writer, offers his suggestion in an excellent new book, The Pacific States of America—a 400-page blockbuster which is only one in a seres which will eventually cover all 50 states. Change, says Peirce, rapid revolutionary change, is the one constant in this "great nation-state": almost everyone is tinkering, experimenting with something—art, science, agriculture, industry, modes of living.

"One out of every three Californians moves each year; Californians change houses as other Americans change automobiles, forever searching for the better life on the other side of the freeway," writes Peirce. "The sense of impermanence is overwhelming." To some it is also frightening. But there are two sides to the coin, perhaps best represented in the words of two California-based writers.

Violence

Mourners for 25 victims of mass slayer in Yuba City

Joan Didion, author of the gloomy, enormously successful Play It As It Lays, speaks of California as "the last stop for all those who came from somewhere else." Hers is the wealthy, neurotic world of fringe-Hollywood, of empty lives and nameless fears, obsessed with a vague idea that "something is wrong," and probably getting worse.

On the other hand there is novelist Christopher Isherwood, who takes the more cheering view that "what people don't realize is that this is where the mistakes are being made: which means that we're going to get the answers first."

Neal Peirce takes the broad middle road between the captious critics and the approving economists. His model, and inspiration, he admits to be John Gunther, whose 1947 study Inside USA was for long the standard work of its kind. Gunther fitted his portrait of the nation into one 1,000-page volume, but the U.S.A. has grown in power and complexity over the past 25 years, and Peirce's project may take an epic nine volumes.

Like Gunther, Peirce is travelling to every state in the union, talking to people: governors and senators, university presidents and labor leaders, hippies and Chicanos and Black militants. So far he has interviewed 1,000 people; and, to judge from the lengthy bibliography, he has done his homework thoroughly. The difficulty with this kind of in-depth journalism is of course to keep up with the times and Peirce tries to deal with the problem, on occasion, by looking into the future.

He asks, for instance, how the aerospace industry can survive "the disarmament blues" following the end of the Vietnam war, and suggests that it will move into fields like mass transit design, environmental control and information systems. A lot of familiar ground is covered, inevitably; but Peirce has much to say that is both new and fascinating: about the sudden development of downtown Los Angeles, from a rundown slum to a city of steel and glass skyscrapers, as more and more big corporations move in from the Mid-West and East: about Disneyland, and what it has done for little Anaheim (did you know that the mules in this well-scrubbed Fantasyland were de-odorized daily?): about San Diego, shining city of scandals and power machinations about some of President Nixon's closest allies.

There is ample new factual detail, too, on conservation battles, the politics of education and Californian leaders from Ronald Reagan to Cesar Chavez. The verdict on Reagan might be summed up as "bad, but it could have been worse": the governor's "political charm and telegenic appeal" are noted, and so are his "lack of creative solutions to California's long-range problems" and his "scornful" attitude towards the poor and minorities.

Peirce is especially thorough on California's agricultural problems and what he calls "the seamy, often shameful" side of it, the condition of the labourers, and the bitter struggle of Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers' Union against agribusiness—the big farmers and their obliging allies in the federal government's department of agriculture. He also has some harsh words for University of California scientists who help the farmers conduct biological and chemical warfare against hundreds of varieties of insects and viruses, thereby killing off many beneficial birds, insects and other wildlife.

In the last resort, however, our author—a Princeton graduate with much TV newsgathering experience—comes down (with suitably grudging noises) on the side of the optimists.

"A throwback to the times of violence remains a distinct possibility in California," we are told. "But out of the valley of discord new forms of social organization, and responsive forms of intergenerational dialogue begin to emerge. California, where America gets the signals of what is about to happen to it, may be in trouble. But it is not yet dead or frozen. It yearns and grows and changes, and it may yet be our best hope."

Solzhenitsyn Raises Critical Storm at Home

By ROBERT G. KAISER
The Washington Post

MOSCOW — Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn's "August, 1914" though banned in the Soviet Union, is the subject of emotional discussion and dispute among a small circle of Soviet intellectuals who have managed to read the book.

A collection of underground reviews of Solzhenitsyn's latest novel circulating here reveals a literary and historical discussion of a frankness and intensity which are not found in official literary writing.

The reviews suggest Solzhenitsyn's symbolic importance for the disaffected intellectuals of Soviet society, a substantial but immeasurable section of the Moscow inteligentsia. (Their number outside Moscow and Leningrad is assumed to be small.)

Ordinary literary criticism in the western sense hardly exists in the Soviet Union — just as novels like Solzhenitsyn's are extremely rare here. By official standards, both are unnecessary, and irrelevant to the real (i.e., political) role of literature and art.

Even the harshest critics show enormous respect for Solzhenitsyn's book. Not one of the reviews is written as though "August, 1914" is just another book by a major writer. Instead they all treat it as a literary and historic event of great importance, and as a catalyst for reflection and debate of the most fundamental questions of Russian history, literature and politics.

Those who praise and those who damn this volume unite behind Solzhenitsyn — Russia's "only living classic," as the very official poet Yevgeni Yevtushenko called him before Solzhenitsyn got into serious trouble here.

Several of the reviewers comment on the wide variety of opinions of "August, 1914." "Against the background of the present spiritual and moral decay in our society, and of its intellectual currents and extraordinary variety of artistic tastes, it would be strange indeed to find any common perception or evaluation of Solzhenitsyn's novel," writes "A. Veretennikov," for example. (The reviews are signed, but the names are apparently all pseudonyms.)

See also Books

Even this critic was surprised by the "broad and stormy" range of disagreement. "I talked with people who were boiling with indignation from reading this book, and with people who wept with pain and happiness over many of its pages. Some were repelled by what they thought were its falseness and retrogression, others were struck by the book's historical truth and (in their opinion) the depth of its insights . . . the heat with which these often mutually-exclusive judgments are expressed suggests that in his new book, Solzhenitsyn has touched on highly important, profound and painful layers of contemporary social conscience."

This is another issue referred to repeatedly: Is Solzhenitsyn writing history, or commentary on the present? If it is history, is it relevant to the present? There is no agreed answer.

The same review signed Veretennikov is devoted largely to these questions. Solzehnitsyn's book is entirely about events of August, 1914, and primarily about the battle of Tannenberg, the great German victory over the Russian army which crippled the Russians for the rest of the First World War. Many readers, according to this critic, complain that Solzhenitsyn wasted his talent on "irreversible history," or that he indulged himself in "a spiritual flight from the present." (His first books were autobiographical, and largely concerned the consequences of Stalinism.)

The critic forgives this attitude, but also rejects it. "It is a manifestation of a typical aspect of our social psychology, which I would call a paralysis of historical feeling," he writes.

The absence of historical feeling in the Russian people, he writes, demonstrates the success of the "experiment" that has been conducted on millions of human beings during the last half-century.

"August, 1914, is primarily a far-reaching artistic attempt to induce our contemporaries to think, feel and live Russian history, an attempt to restore lost historical memory, the importance of which is impossible to assess for modern social consciousness," he writes.

One of the most interesting pieces in this collection takes a much harsher view of Solzhenitsyn's version of history. This review, signed "K. Golovin," challenges the intellectual assumptions of Solzhenitsyn's history, and especially the personalities he attributes to his characters.

Golovin argues that Solzhenitsyn writes too calmly about a tumultuous transitional period in Russia's past. "One feels that the author should . . . violate the rules of literary decorum and good manners," he writes, "and blurt out in one breath what he has accumulated. Unhasty fluency of narration may be appropriate for nature — mountains, woods, sunrises — but it doesn't conform to the explosiveness of events (covered in the book) . . ."

This reviewer concludes that Solzhenitsyn has "placed modern conditions in the past," and peopled his novel with the kinds of characters that can be found in today's Russia, but which didn't exist in the Russia of 1914.

(This analysis may appeal to western readers of Boris Pasternak's "Dr. Zhiyago," who often found Zhivago's erratic behavior both frustrating and inexplicable.)

The same reviewer also calls Solzhenitsyn to task for making allusions to the contemporary scene which are too obvious. He is unhappy about the black-and-white portraits of heroes and villains, and particularly about Solzhenitsyn's treatment of would-be revolutionaries in 1914.

Solzhenitsyn's use of language is also hotly disputed in these reviews. He deliberately tried to write in a pre-revolutionary language, reviving old forms, exploiting Russian Orthodox Church usages, and even inventing words based on old roots, all the time avoiding the modernizations and simplifications of post-revolutionary Russians. (This aspect of the book is lost in Michael Glenny's translation into English, published in Britain and in America.)

Many readers of the book here complained that these linguistic experiments make it extremely difficult to read and understand. Friends of Solzhenitsyn report that in subsequent volumes of the work ("August, 1914" is the first volume of a mammoth project that may go on for 10 volumes, or more), he will abandon the more radical lingusitic innovations of the first volume.

Victim of the Backlash

The Sun

Well, so they finally got Bryce. It took them two chops, two bounces, because he's a tough little Irishman. So they finally got him last weekend and when they did they vitiated what was left of the left wing of the Liberal party.

It's always been the contention of this department that the Trudeau government circa 1968 was further left than the public that elected it realized.

With John Munro and Ron Basford and Bryce Mackasey and even Edgar Benson in his pre-Carter days — all led by a former member of the NDP — the government set out on some very progressive goals.

The whittling process started nine months ago when Mr. Trudeau, bowing to the pressure of the business community, demoted Benson, demoted Basford and demoted Mackasey from labor to immigration and manpower.

The businessman rap on Mackasey that time was that he brought in the legislation guaranteeing that management was not entitled to spring major technological changes on unions in the middle of a contract. (That very issue was the argument in the recent labor dispute at this paper). His legislation was watered down after he was kicked out of labor. Now the final purge has taken place, with Mackasey announcing that he wanted to get out of the cabinet so he can spend more time with his family and the usual departing cliches and so.

Of more interest are the remarks Mackasey made to 200 of his civil servants at a private farewell dinner at Mont Gabriel, Que., last Thursday night. He told them — rather more honest than discreet, as usual with Bryce — that he was being tossed out of the cabinet as the post-election scapegoat. He was being sacrificed to the election backlash against the soaring costs of the Mackasey-designed unemployment insurance system.

In his private thoughts in what he foolishly assumed would remain a private audience, Mackasey told his officials that another of the reasons for his dismissal was the decision to admit the Ugandan Asians during an election campaign. He said it was the proudest moment of his career when the first plane bearing the Ugandans put down on Canadian soil. "He was in tears himself," said one of the officials, "and there wasn't a dry eye in the place."

Mackasey was such an easy target for exaggeration. To a society raised on the philosophy of the dole, the idea that some unemployed family men might be able to get as much as $100 a week for a maximum of 52 weeks was an outrage. Those who wanted to exploit the backlash, including some local broadcasters, left the impression that anyone could get $100. As it turned out, the average payment for those who had paid enough in to qualify was $66. The average payments lasted 14 weeks — not 52.

The problem with the present Canadian unemployment insurance plan is not that payments are outrageous — it is that the level of unemployment is outrageous. That's why Mackasey sealed his fate with his emotional outburst at that supposedly-private dinner against the Trudeau financial mandarins, especially deputy finance minister Simon Reisman. These were the people, Mackasey reminded us all, who decreed as a matter of government policy to curb inflation by purposely raising the unemployment rate. This must have been the only government in history — whether through Mr. Trudeau's honesty or naivete — to announce publicly that it was purposely going to increase the unemployment rate.

BRYCE MACKASEY
. . . more honest than discreet

There's nothing wrong with his unemployment insurance plan, Mackasey maintains. It's the best in the world, he says, and if the unemployment rate were brought down to where it belongs, around four per cent, it would also prove "the cheapest in the world." He deserves some sympathy for his bitterness in being blamed for a massive "deficit" in jobless funds when the reason for the debt is that his government shoved the jobless rate far beyond what anyone thought politically practical.

He's a passionate, scrappy guy, in a bloodless government that lacks passion. At the Liberal leadership convention in the Ottawa ice rink in the spring of 1968, as the right-wing party forces of Hellyer and Winters fought to close in on Trudeau on the final ballots, Mackasey stood in the Trudeau box and led the frantic cheer-leading before the TV cameras to rally the troops down on the floor and gather the final crucial votes.

Those of us on the floor marvelled at his energy and then saw the triumph turn into near tragedy when he suffered a heart attack moments after the announcement giving Trudeau the victory. He fights hard for causes he believes in and loses hard.

During this election campaign, as he saw the fainthearted in his party recoil before the backlash, he talked of how politicians are not in office merely to perpetuate themselves. He said, "I'd rather be defeated as a Liberal than win as a reactionary." He won, but now the reactionaries within his own party, of whom more than a few abound, have finally got him.

Young 'Lost Faith' In School Rules

Dismissed principal John Young told his apyeal hearing Friday he lost faith in the worth of school rules a year after taking over Campbell River Senior Secondary School in 1965.

Young, who testified for five hours under cross-examination by school board lawyer J. S. Clyne, said he decided in 1966 that conventional rules were inappropriate and were the reason many schools do "a poor job" in education.

Young said he began to believe after being appointed principal that schools in general were bad places for large numbers of students.

" In 1965 I was still clinging rather pathetically to a set of old-fashioned educational principles."

Education department officials and the district school board, which fired Young in September on grounds of misconduct and neglect of duty, have criticized him for a lack of rules and regulations at the senior secondary school.

What Young called his "old fashioned principles" were embodied in a lengthy memo of school policy which he submitted to the school board in September, 1965, on taking up the principalship.

Clyne introduced the memo as evidence, claiming it reflected both on Young's credibility and on his later "lack of cooperation" with the board.

John Laxton, counsel for Young, objected that Clyne could not introduce the memo as relevant to the grounds of dismissal, because the grounds were based on Young's actions 1970-72.

B. J. B. Morahan, chairman of the board of reference, ruled that the 1965 memo could only go to credibility.

Robert Wilson, board member, said it seemed to him "there is a great difference between the issue of element of falsification, deliberate or otherwise, and a change of mind over a period of seven years."

Young's cross-examination resumed this morning as the hearing moves into its fifth day. Although both counsels said they were willing to proceed through the weekend, Sunday was ruled out by Morahan as a "non-juridical day."

No Liquor For Short Crossings

Highways Minister Robert Strachan said Friday he is considering opening a bar on the Queen of Prince Rupert, the ferry that runs between Kelsey Bay and Prince Rupert, an overnight run.

Strachan made the comment after reports that he was considering the sale of liquor on the ferries system.

"There's no way we would allow liquor on the short crossings" between Vancouver Island and the Mainland, he said.

But liquor on the long overnight run is being considered, he confirmed. Ferries personnnel have been studying the dispensing of liquor at the Empress hotel before a final decision is made.

ADVANCE CIVIC POLLS NEXT WEEK

Advance polls will be held next week for voters who can not cast their ballots for the civic elections on Sat., Dec, 9.

Eligibility for the advance poll requires that voters will be absent on election day by reason of conscience or because of circumstances beyond their control.

The seven area municipalities will conduct advance polls on the following days:

Victoria — Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., in the city clerk's office.

Saanich — Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., in the municipal clerk's office at Saanich municipal hall.

Esquimalt — Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., front office of municipal hall.

Oak Bay — Thursday and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., in the municipal hall.

Central Saanich — Thursday and Friday, 2 to 5 p.m., in the municipal hall.

North Saanich — Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., in the municipal hall.

Sidney — Wednesday, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. in the municipal hall.

ROAD CHECKS BEGIN

Holiday time is police road check time.

Saanich police have already held two and Victoria is about to begin theirs.

Saanich's first check was held, as 230 drivers now know, on Nov. 23. From 7:30 to 9 p.m., cars were stopped on Harriet at Obed. The checkpoint was changed to the 3400 block Quadra from 10:15 to 11:30 p.m.

Police reported that 33 warning tickets, four traffic offence notices, one traffic violation report and one 24-hour suspension were issued.

A second Saanich check on Nov. 28 screened 532 vehicles in the 3300 block Cook from 7:45 to 9:30 p.m. and then from 10:30 to 11:30 p.m.

Police said 20 warning tickets, four traffic offences notices and one traffic violation report were issued.

Saanich will hold another road check each weekend from now until the end of the year.

Victoria police say their road checks will begin any time now.

Prisoner Found Hanging In Penitentiary Cell

MONTREAL (CP) — James Coles 22, of Montreal, was found hanging in his cell at St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary early today, a prison official said.

The official said Coles was found shortly after one a.m. with his bedsheets knotted around his throat.

Coles escaped from the maximum-security prison last August while serving an armed robbery term. He was recaptured in Vancouver and returned to the prison in October.

Seaman Dies of Illness

A 44-year-old seaman was pronounced dead in Victoria Friday half an hour after he was taken off a Vancouver-bound Liberian freighter.

Coroner Edmond St. Jorre ruled Friday that Kwong Chiu Tok of Kowloon died of natural causes. The deceased had suffered from severe nephritis (inflammation of the kidneys).

Kwong was taken off the freighter Grace Venture around 6 p.m. Friday and rushed to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 6:30 p.m.

Hopes Rise for Harnessing Sun

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A "major advance" toward controlling the energy process of the sun and the H-bomb to make electricity was reported Friday by the Atomic Energy Commission.

The new results at the AEC's Princeton University plasma physics laboratory seem to offer the greatest hope yet of harnessing the process, nuclear fusion, to ease the world's energy crisis early in the 21st century.

AEC chairman James Schlessinger said these results — higher pressures than any yet achieved in fusion experiments — "further brighen the prospects of realizing commercial fusion power."

LOOKING AHEAD

Another AEC official commented that: "We are at present aiming at demonstrating fusion's scientific feasibility in the period 1980-82, and we feel we ought to have commercial fusion reactors around the turn of the century."

Fusion reactors would burn plentiful forms of hydrogen with what is promised as "minimal" envorionmental impact.

The new Princeton achievement may also bring the United States abreast with the Sovier Union for the first time in this field where Russia has long been devoting more money and effort.

The Princeton scientists successfully contained a hot deuterium gas at the density at which a fusion reactor might operate. Deuterium is one of the forms of hydrogen that a fusion reactor might burn.

NEW TECHNIQUE

The scientists also demonstrated a technique which should ultimately make that gas hot enough to achieve the necessary thermonuclear, or H-bomb-like, reaction.

They maintained their reaction for only a fiftieth of a second, but this is the range of all fusion experiments today. These results made Schlessinger and Dr. Robert Hirsch, the AEC's director of controlled thermonuclear research, speak with greater optimism than men in their jobs have displayed for some years.

"I think that, overall, we and the Russians are going down the road reasonably close together," said Hirsch, who recently visited Russia's two main fusion laboratories.

COSTLY MOVE

As a result of President Nixon's Moscow visit and follow-up by presidential science adviser Edward David Jr., Hirsch added, "we'll be moving forward in the near future to bring our co-operation even closer."

But he also said that moving toward the possible goals "will take a lot of money," something like $150 million a year, versus a present $40 million. The current spending total rises to some $75 million counting AEC work on lasers, which are largely military, but also of possible use as fusion machine tiggers.

The Princeton experiments were done by Drs. R. A. Ellis, Kees Bol, H. P. Eubank, H. P. Furth, R. A. Jacobson, L. C. Johnson, E. Mazzuacto, W. Stocick and E. L. Tolmas. They did them on a Princeton version of a machine called the "tokamak," with which the Russians in 1969 first began to maintain significant reactions.

7 MILLION DEGREES

In their "adiagatic toroidal compressor" machine, the Princetonians heated a dough-nut-shaped plasma (or electrically charged gas) to an electron temperatue of 10 million degrees. Then they compressed the plasma magnetically, until the electron temperature rose to 25 million degrees and the density reached a hundred trillion particles per cubic centimeter.

Their deuterium ions (or charged atoms) reached a temperature of only seven million degrees, however. About 100 million degrees will be needed to ignite a true theremonuclear reactor. This can now be expected in larger devices, the AEC said.

The results were also called "several times higher" than the best Soviet results yet reported. However, Hirsch added, "they can do this also, I'm sure. Now that we have shown this, they can repeat it. And in terms of density, we all have to go about a factor of five higher. But I think we have shown that with time and money to build much larger systems we can achieve such goals."

DRUGS SEIZED IN ALBERNI

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — RCMP said Friday they seized a quantity of crude morphine from a freighter unloading in Port Alberni on Oct. 28.

A total of 871 grams or about two pounds of the drug was taken from the Jag Darshan, moored at a paper mill wharf here. The seizure followed a routine customs search by RCMP and customs officials.

The drug was located over a loose tile in the ceiling of a washroom. Two tar-like bricks were inside, one in a plastic bag wrapped in a sock and the other in a tobacco tin.

An RCMP spokesman estimated the street value of the drugs at anywhere from $5,000 and $30,000.

He said he did not believe the shipment was meant for distribution here but for some other port, possibly Vancouver.

The drug's origin was unknown, except that it comes "from somewhere in the East," said the spokesman.

BUS-TRUCK SMASH in Surrey Friday injured three students and the driver of the school bus. All three students were burned when the bus caught fire after the impact. There were eight students in the 57-seat bus at the time. Several were treated for shock.

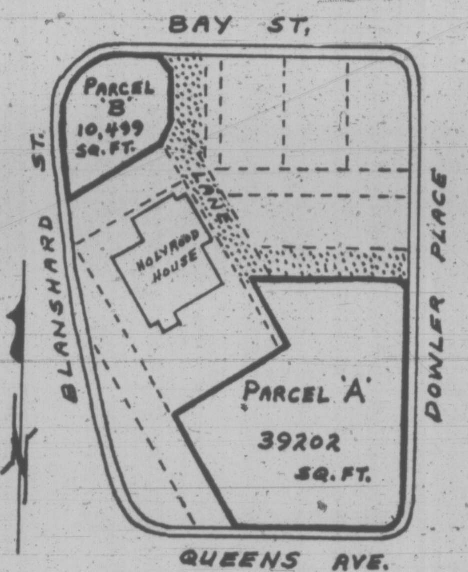
LOTS FOR SALE

Notice is hereby given that the City of Victoria intends to offer for sale by tender the lands illustrated on this plan which are not legally registered at this time but are described as follows:

Parcel "A", being land situated on the north side of Queens Avenue between Blanshard Street and Dowler Place, having an area of approximately 39,202 sq. ft.

and

Parcel "B", being land situated on the south side of Bay Street to the east of Blanshard Street, having an area of approximately 10,499 sq. ft.



Development proposals for these properties are to be for commercial or commercial/residential development in accordance with the regulations prescribed in Part 8 of the Zoning By-law—"C-1 Limited Commercial District."

The sale of this land will be subject to its rezoning to "C-1 Limited Commercial District" from its present "R-3 Multiple Family Residential District" classification.

Tenders are to be accompanied by development proposals sufficiently detailed to enable Council to evaluate the design merits of the scheme.

Sealed offers for either or both of these parcels will be received by the Municipal Manager, City Hall, Victoria, B.C., until 12:00 o'clock noon on Friday, January 12th, 1973, and must be marked on the envelope, "Offer for purchase, Blanshard Urban Renewal Area." All offers must be accompanied by a deposit cheque for 10% of the offering price.

Highest or any offer will not necessarily be accepted.

THE LION: HANDLED WITH CARE

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Lightly fractured history written with a volatile pen and a lampoonist's acrid touch, is the substance of The Lion in Winter which opened a week's run at Langham Court Theatre, Friday.

The attractively mounted Victoria Theatre Guild production has a number of attributes, not the least being an imaginative set and effective lighting.

Under the competent direction of Barbara and Michael Meiklejohn the warring, devious and mercenary Plantagenets — Henry II, his queen, Eleanor of Aquataine, and sons Richard, Geoffrey and John — rage, purr, torment and beguile each other in the castle of Chinon on Christmas day in 1183.

But in spite of the ferocity, the treachery, the sometimes visible heartbreak, playwright James Goldman has given his characters the power to fence, to turn aside the point of the sword at the moment of blood-letting with a lightning shift of mood.

And no one in the cast utilizes this power as well as Helen Smith.

As things turn out it becomes her play. Her Eleanor touches us, convinces us; we become aware of the different levels upon which she exists.

We sense the truth of her feeling for Henry long before she makes it overt. And in the final scene, her emotional outbreak and its swift change to laughter is superbly handled.

There is only one discrepancy — makeup. Mrs. Smith looks far too fresh and bonny to accord with constant references in the script to her aging and sagging face.

Anthony Jenkins' Henry is a strong characterization, but for the first half of the play it lacks the range of which he is capable.

The Lion opens with a tender scene between Henry and the young French princess Alais — sensitively played Marie Stillin. The problem is that Jenkins opens so forcefully that, for a while there is insufficient cadence and contrast and his performance tends to become monotonous.

Nevertheless, he reveals a reserve of power that allows him to be highly effective in the climatic scene when, exposing his three sons in acts of treachery, he disowns them.

An intense, bitter portrait of Geoffrey, brainiest and least favored of the three, is created by John Heath.

Tony Bukowiecki and Nick Skelton play Richard and John respectively, and Kevin Haxell is Phillip of France.

Multiple scenes with closing curtains between each give the play an episodic nature that is distracting.

This could have been easily resolved, considering the excellent design of the set which was basic throughout, by a formalized handling of the changes.

Colorful costuming is by Biddy Gaddes.

The Lion in Winter runs through Dec. 9 with curtain at 8:15 p.m.

OAK BAY

JOHN EAMER-GOULT
For Alderman

In the 1950's and 1960's it was often argued that extensive apartment construction would broaden the tax base and thus lower property taxes for home owners. When first seeking election two years ago, I disputed this claim and urged a professional study of this question. Mr. Frederich Zech was accordingly commissioned to prepare a study of this matter. His exhaustive report demonstrated that the tax benefits to the home owner of extensive department construction were negligible. To be specific, if 145 acres of central Oak Bay were covered with apartments, the net saving to the average tax payer would be $6.30. This miniscule saving must be weighed against the influx of automobiles and congestion resulting from this apartment expansion and drastically changing the character of Oak Bay. Therefore, my pledge is to continue, if re-elected to Council, to fight to retain Oak Bay as basically an area of single family dwellings.

P.E.I. LIBERALS FACE POLL TEST

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Three provincial byelections Monday will give the Liberal government of Prince Edward Island its first real test at the polls since a general election in 1970 returned it to power with a solid majority.

Premier Alex Campbell called the byelections in Kings 1st, Kings 4th and Queens 2nd ridings to fill vacancies created by the resignation of three Liberals—one to accept a Senate seat and the others to run in the Oct. 30 federal election.

The Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and, for the first time, tne New Democratic Party, have entered candidates in each of the ridings.

It is the first time the New Democrats have made a strong bid in this province where elections are traditionally a straight two-way fight between Liberals and Conservatives.

There was not one NDPer nominated for the last general election held in May, 1970, when the Liberals won 27 of the 32 house seats, reducing the Conservatives to five members. In a byelection called in the fall of 1970, the Liberals easily retained a seat vacated by the death of Justice Minister J. Elmer Blanchard.

Among candidates in the running is Melvin McQuaid, a former provincial cabinet minister and Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Cardigan until he decided not to run in the October election.

Mr. McQuaid has said he may contest the leadership of the provincial PC party, vacant since the resignation of George Key a year ago.

B.C. Mines Yield $631M

The total value of minerial production in British Columbia this year is estimated at $631.4 million, an increase of $104.6 million over 1971, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick said Friday.

In a statement, the minister said the substantial increase results from much larger copper and coal shipments, larger sales of natural gas, and a substantial increase in asbestos production.

Metal production — with estimated value of $367.9 million — accounts for 58 per cent of the total.

Despite a decline in copper prices to 43.97 cents a pound in 1972 from 46.69 cents a pound in 1971, copper production is valued at $218 million. This is nearly $88 million more than in 1971 and represents 34 per cent of the total value of all metals.

The value of gold and nickel increased slightly, but all other metals declined.

Industrial minerals are estimated to value $26.7 million, an increase of 27.5 per cent. This is largely due to increased asbestos production.

Biggest Swindle of All Time, Says Charge

* * *

Story of Vesco and The IOS Empire

By PHILIP GREER
The Washington Post

In just over two years, Robert L. Vesco has traveled from the relative obscurity of a smallish manufacturing company in New Jersey to centre stage in what is alleged to be one of the biggest international swindles of all time.

In those two years, he has traveled the world, presented himself as the savior of thousands of small investors and, according to charges filed against him and 41 other defendants last week, he has bilked those investors out of more than $224 million.

The papers filed in federal district court in New York trace a trail of intricate financial manoeuvres, the creation of a host of dummy corporations and what the government calls "systematic looting" of the mutual funds managed by Investors Overseas Services, Ltd., the once-mighty financial complex based in Geneva, Switzerland, which Vesco has controlled since September, 1970.

The charges were brought by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission after a two-year investigation.

Strong Devotion To His Family

The tall, slender, 36-year-old, dark-haired Vesco, with piercing eyes, an iron-fisted manner — and what his neighbors around Boonton, N.J., call a strong devotion to his family and community — did not appear in court at a hearing on a government request for a temporary restraining order.

He is reported to be in Costa Rica, where he recently bought a ranch and where, he has told neighbors, he plans to move his family.

With or without Vesco, though, the papers filed by the SEC weave a trail of financial manoeuvrings that could baffle Sherlock Holmes.

Along with its complaint, the commission filed a "memorandum of plaintiff securities and exchange commission in support of motion for a preliminary injunction and ancillary relief."

The following account is taken from that memorandum.

Stock Transferred To 'Shell' Company

Vesco took control of IOS in September, 1970 with an agreement to lend the fund giant $10 million. (IOS, although claiming a net worth of $100 million, was desperately short of ready cash.) The money, only $5 million of which ever went to IOS, came from a subsidiary of International Controls Corp. of Fairfield, N.J., of which Vesco was chairman and in which he owned about 26 per cent of the outstanding stock. From then until early 1972, the memo says, Vesco consolidated his hold on IOS, including the buying of more than 6 million shares owned by Bernard Cornfeld, its founder and chairman who was deposed in April, 1970. (The original loan was repaid by October, 1970 — with cash from IOS.)

In March, 1972, according to the SEC, Vesco and his "group" launched their scheme to strip IOS of its assets. The first step was to transfer the stock in IOS owned by ICC to a shell company called Kilmorey Investments. Kilmorey, incorporated in the Bahamas Islands, ostensibly owned by associates of Vesco, was actually controlled by Vesco himself, the memo said.

In announcing the transaction, the SEC said ICC reported the "total divorcement of itself and its personnel from IOS" for a payment of $2.8 million. What Vesco did not disclose, the commission charged, is that Kilmorey was a shell company (it had no assets of its own) and the only money it had was advanced by the Bahamas Commonwealth Bank, controlled by Vesco and ICC.

A major part of the sale price — 1.7 million — was not in cash, but an obligation by Kilmorey to indemnify ICC for taxes — which might never become due — and whatever cash did change hands actually came from the IOS-managed mutual funds. In addition, the complaint says, control of IOS remained with Vesco.

The second step was to take control of the funds' stock holdings away from the Bank of New York, which had been the custodian. At first, the bank refused to recognize instructions to turn all the cash from the sale of stocks owned by the funds over to the Overseas Development Bank, Luxembourg, an IOS subsidiary, because it was not sure the bank was secure enough.

(Bank of New York held all the stocks owned by the funds: the cash was kept by Swiss Credit Bank in Geneva. Swiss Credit's role was terminated by Vesco on March 6, 1972 and that function moved to ODB.)

Intense pressure was brought on the bank to transfer cash to ODB Luxembourg, with a number of meetings in New York — some attended by Vesco, who had supposedly "divorced" himself from IOS. On April 25, American National Bank of Morristown, N.J. agreed to be custodian of the stock, in place of the New York bank. As part of the transfer to American National, Bank of New York switched $8.5 million in cash to ODB Luxembourg — and Vesco's plan was under way.

Assets Sent to Another Shell Firm

In the third phase, Vesco packaged all of ICC's investments in IOS and transferred them to another Shell company, Global Holdings, Ltd., owned by Norman LeBlanc, who is also a defendant in the case. LeBlanc paid ICC in the form of a $7.35 million promissory note and assumption of tax obligations. Late in June, however, Venture Fund, one of the IOS group, invested $20 million in Global — contrary to its own bylaws — and LeBlanc paid off the note a few days later, on June 30.

At the time, the SEC said, Vesco told the ICC board that the transfer was an arms-length transaction, that the price was fair and that there was no connection between him and LeBlanc.

Vesco also claimed a profit on the sale, which the SEC says was based on the tax obligation — that might never become due.

The transfer of ICC's holdings and the sales of the IOS subsidiaries, in reality, gave Vesco complete control of the assets of the funds, according to the commissoon.

Mostly High-Grade U.S. Securities

Phase four of the operation actually began in April, 1972, before phase three was completed, when the managers of the IOS funds — under Vesco's orders — began liquidating $224 million worth of marketable, mostly high-grade U.S. securities.

In most cases, the complaint alleges, the money from the sales was used in ways that violated the bylaws and charters of the funds themselves. For example, the funds were not allowed to loan money, except if they bought government bonds. Nevertheless, Venture Fund loaned Global Holdings 10 million. Venture had assets of about $51 million, of which 41 million was in high-grade securities and $7.3 million was in cash. All of the stocks were sold.

Marketable Assets Were All Sold

Fund of funds, the flagship fund of the IOS group, had assets of more than $113 million, including $55 million in marketable stocks and $51.2 million in interest-bearing deposits. Starting on June 16, "virtually all" of its marketable assets were sold.

The SEC memo goes on through the liquidations of the other fund portfolios, noting that they were practically all liquidated.

The money generated by the sales was used to further Vesco's personal interests, the memo charges. Venture Fund invested, in all, $20 million in Global Holdings. From the sales by Fund of Funds, $60 million was transferred to London banks and then to Bahamas Commonwealth Bank, under Vesco control, and then invested in a Shell corporation in Costa Rica called Interamerican Capital S.A.

Vesco, the SEC notes, has tried to interest the Costa Rican authorities in establishing a tax haven in that country.

Various other funds invested millions of dollars in low-calibre companies owned or controlled by Vesco and his associates, the SE charged.

The net effect, up to this point, allegedly has been to divert about $125 million of the nearly quarter of a billion dollars realized from the sales of stock.

(One of the investments which has not yet been made is the Paradise Island Casino in Nassau, the Bahamas. Vesco has had several meetings with officers of Resorts International, which owns Paradise Island.)

If the SEC charges are upheld in court — it could take years for the case to reach that stage — they would mark one of the world's most bewildering swindles.

The charges would indicate that the thousands of investors around the world who still own shares of IOS-managed funds have been virtually stripped of all worthwhile assets.

CLC Reps' Union Sets Strike Vote

MONTREAL (CP) — The union for the 33 men who represent the Canadian Labor Congress across Canada announced Friday that negotiations for a new contract with the CLC have broken down.

Roger Bedard, a negotiator for the CLC's representatives union, said it will go to its members for a strike vote.

The union has the right to strike only in Ontario, however. It is seeking legal accreditation in other provinces.

Mr. Bedard said the stumbling block in contract talks is that the CLC budget for travelling expenses had not changed since 1956.

GM Ups '73 Prices

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. announced Friday it will increase prices on 1973-model cars and trucks by an average of $52 or 1.1 per cent, effective Monday.

The company said the increase reflects costs incurred to meet government safety and emission standards. The parent company, General Motors Corp., earlier announced price jumps in the United States averaging $54 per unit or a 1.2-per-cent increase.

The announcement followed a decision of the U.S. Price Commission to allow the company a 1.53-per-cent increase. The commission also allowed increases to Ford and Chrysler companies, but stipulated that the price rise may apply only to vehicles produced after Dec. 1.

Revenue Branch Needs More Than Stepping-Stone Approach

By I. H. ASPER

The prime minister's decision to award the much beleagured revenue portfolio in the new cabinet to Robert Stanbury is being welcomed by a broad cross-section of tax-watchers across the country.

The portfolio which has had too many changes of ministers for its own good over the past few years has been treated by successive governments as a junior portfolio, because its policy is overshadowed by that of the finance ministry.

This has been a great mistake on the part of federal governments; a mistake which Robert Stanbury, if past performance is any yardstick, may be inclined to correct.

* * *

There is no more sensitive area of government, in its relationship with the nine million individual taxpayers and 200,000 corporate citizens.

It is the department which pervades the financial life of everyone, more so than any other, and it is a department which has suffered because of a rather cavalier and casual treatment by all political parties.

The sensitivity of this department, or the lack of it, has an incalculable effect on how people view their government and the degree of respect they give to the revenue laws.

Traditionally, the post has been used as a training ground for junior ministers on the way up. Governments have had a tendency to appoint economic or accountant types to the ministry. A major breakthrough was made a couple of years ago when Herb Gray, a practising lawyer, was given the post.

During his tenure, great improvements were made in the operations of the department.

The revenue department, by virtue of the type of work it does, in collecting about $15 billion per year from a rather reluctant populace, has had a tendency to become rather isolated, mechanized and, to some extent, de-humanized.

When Gray took over from Jean-Pierre Cote, who himself had only held the post for a few months, he began the process of attempting to improve the much deteriorated relationship between taxpayer and tax collector.

* * *

Information bulletins, interpretation bulletins and advance rulings on tax matters began to make an important contribution to this end.

The repair job is by no means done, and there is still a long way to go before the department becomes a servant rather than the master of the public.

Particularly at this time, the post is highly sensitive. The new minister is faced with the monumental task of administering the most complex, sometimes anomalous, sometimes ambiguous, often unduly harsh, but dramatically important tax reform bill which Parliament passed last January.

This week's gathering of the cream of the country's tax practitioners in the accounting, economic, business and legal fraternities at the Canadian Tax Foundation conference left no doubt that much amendment and softening of the new tax laws is still required.

Thus, Stanbury is presented with a major challenge: To improve taxpayer morale, business community confidence in the new tax laws, and at the same time bring forward as quickly as possible the amendments required to rationalize the legislation.

Stanbury comes to his post with an excellent training. As one who obtained a bachelor of arts degree in journalism from the University of Western Ontario, he will realize that law should be written so that everyone can understand it; that clarity and precision of the rules is to be preferred over ambiguity and ministerial discretion in interpreting those rules.

●

Your Taxes

As a man who worked for a time as a public relations executive, he will realize that no matter how well intentioned, rational or logical the product is i.e. the tax reform legistlation, if it creates frustration, anger, and hostility amongst those it is intended to serve, it is the law, not the people which must change.

Mr. Stanbury practised law in Toronto for 10 years before entering politics on a full-time basis. One would expect a commitment from him in favor of civil liberites and improving the rights of ordinary citizens in dealing with a sometimes harsh and arbitrary set of laws, most of which are incomprehensible to them.

It will be interesting to see whether or not Stanbury is prepared to move, along with his senior partner, Finance Minister John Turner, also a trained tax lawyer, in the direction of greater taxpayer rights under the new legislation.

* * *

His parliamentary record, which began in 1965, is encouraging in this regard. When he was still a backbencher he was the sponsor of a number of civil liberties-oriented private bills dealing with such questions as electronic eavesdropping, protection of citizen privacy, and electoral reforms.

Clearly, there is reason to hope that Stanbury will want to move the tax department away from the harshness of the past, toward a more moderate course in its dealing with taxpayers.

search the records to find out what the tax returns of his neighbors contain.

For Stanbury, the revenue post is more than just a job. It will probably determine his future political direction. Some ministers, Cote for example, have gone from this portfolio into obscurity, while others, the former finance minister Edgar J. Benson notably, have risen to senior ministers because of their work in this department.

If the present government wishes to retain office, it is going to have to sensitize its approach to its relationship with the tax-paying public.

Indeed, Stanbury, though extremely well-qualified for the challenge, has been handed a difficult and important assignment. Because of his training, his experience, and his personal philosophy, there is reason to hope he will master that problem.

Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer and leader of the Manitoba Liberal Party.

Objectors Allowed

ROME (Reuter)—The Italian Senate approved a bill Thursday night permitting conscientious objection to military service on religious, philosophical or moral grounds. The legislation, which must now go before the Chamber of Deputies, will permit conscientious objectors to serve in branches of the services not requiring the bearing of arms or alternatively to do a longer period of civilian service.

BLOOD DONOR CLINICS SET

The Victoria Red Cross has set an objective of 450 donors for three blood clinics to be held next week.

On Tuesday the clinic will be at the Work Point Barracks gymnasium from 9 a.m. to noon and 1:15 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Wednesday there will be a pair of clinics. The Juan de Fuca Kinsmen Club is sponsoring the clinic at Colwood community hall, 2219 Sooke Rd., to be held from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The second clinic, sponsored by the Teamsters' Union, will be at the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. and 7 to 8 p.m.

2 More Rink Choices

Two alternatives to suggested methods of providing more ice skating surface in Saanich have been put forward by one of the municipal aldermanic candidates.

Leslie Peake, a University of Victoria physical education professor, brought up the rink question to make council aware of as many choices as possible before getting too involved with private versus public facilities and a referendum likely to be put following the election Dec. 9.

The first alternative Peake proposes is a joint undertaking between the community and the university, which he said is ameable to discussing the idea. Arena facilities for UVic campus at the moment have no high order of priortiy.

The second is to inquire about the use of portable freezing equipment capable of providing an artificial ice system on any hard surface judged suitable.

Peake said he had manufacturer's specifications describing portable systems which might be installed in an unused warehouse, or set up on a tennis court, lacrosse box or parking lot, provided there was adequate drainage.

At present Saanich anticipates going to the voters with a proposal for a second municipally-owned and operated ice surface to spread demands being placed upon Pearkes Arena.

A private company, Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd., of Burnaby, also is interested in the capital region as a possible site for an arena complex that would cater to public recreation and organized use such as hockey and figure skating.

Saanich council is divided on whether a second rink should be given priority over public works projects to alleviate flooding and improve the road system, having approved the submission of a referendum by a single vote.

Pakistanis Riot

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (Reuter) — Rioting broke out and shots were fired at a mass open air rally here Friday when President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto raised the question of Pakistan's recognition of Bangladesh. Thousands of people in the crowd waved their arms and shouted "Namanzoor" (unacceptable) when he broached the question near the end of a two-hour address. Then shots were fired and the crowd fled, chased by men firing handguns and wielding staves.

Breakthrough In Negev Water Hunt

BEER SHEBA, Israel (AP) — Israeli scientists report they hope to revolutionize agriculture in the Negev Desert by tapping millions of gallons of brackish water in vast pools beneath the arid surface.

First experiments point to a breakthrough in the use of salty water for irrigation, said scientists at the Negev Arid Zone Research Institute here.

"There are literally hundreds of billions of cubic metres of water beneath our feet," said one researcher.

One subterranean pool, about 1,200 square miles in size, starts from the Dead Sea and runs southwest toward the Negev settlement of Sde Boqer and the Sinai Desert frontier.

The Hebrew University's division of ground water research mapped out most of the underground reservoirs in an extensive hydrological survey earlier this year.

Dr. Arie Issar, who headed the survey team, said one should not confuse the pools of brackish water, which are to some extent self-replenishing, with the Sinai's vast reservoirs of fossil water, dating back millions of years. The extent of the latter reserves has not been determined.

Researchers say the Dead Sea-Sde Boqer pool extends to about a half-mile below the surface and contains 1,000 milligrams of salt per litre. So far, the acceptable amount of salt for farming purposes has been 250 milligrams per litre.

Dr. Marvin Twearsky, an American-born soil scientist, and Dr. Dov Pasternak, a physiologist from Brazil, have been conducting irrigation experiments with brakish water at the institute the last two years.

The scientists planted 4½ acres of cotton which they irrigated with fresh water and an identical-size plot irrigated with saline water containing 1,000 milligrams of salt per litre.

The plot irrigated with fresh water yielded about 3,600 pounds of cotton an acre and the second plot about 4,400 pounds an acre.

The scientists also were able to produce higher yields of Bermuda and Rhodes grasses using brackish water. The wheat crops were about the same.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The operators of the Fred Astaire Fiesta Dance Studio at 723 Fort have done a quick-step out of town, leaving a swath of bills and unfulfilled contracts behind them.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Birch left town Nov. 15 on the orders of their boss, Allen Regosin of Tucson, Ariz.

They had orders to pack everything they could use in the Tucson studio and take it with them.

Some of their clientele were told that the Birchs had family problems and would have to go to Birchs' home town of Spokane. They said they would be back in two weeks' time.

However, a check with the studio's secretary confirms that the Birches had no intention of doing this. They were sent money by Regosin and promised work in Arizona.

On Regosin's orders, according to the secretary, they brought over a truck from Vancouver, filled it with tables, chairs, records and gear and headed south.

They Came for Lessons

Some of their clientele, who have paid thousands of dollars for dance lessons, only knew of the leave-taking when they appeared at the studio after the Birches had left.

The secretary said she had wanted to tell the customers that the Birches had no intention of coming back but she had been told that Regosin's man in Vancouver, identified as Ernie Thesman, would be reopening the studio in two weeks.

An employee of Thesman, when phoned, said he was "out of town, travelling" and wouldn't be back until Monday.

The secretary asks that her name not be printed because she still hopes the studio will reopen — she also hopes to get the wages still owing to her.

The name she's known by at the studio is not her real name anyhow. She explains that she was "pretty mad" when she was told she couldn't use her own name. None of the help at the studio were allowed to use their own name.

"We were told it was to stop customers bothering us at home," she reports.

Regosin also used a different name up here. Letters to his creditors bear the signature A. Regal, the name he used for his Victoria operation.

However, a check with the provincial registrar of companies' department reveals that an Allen and Nancy (his wife) Regosin registered the FADS Holdings Ltd. on June 19, 1970, using the studio address of 723 Fort.

Statements Not Filed

The company has not fulfilled the legal requirement to file annual financial statements with the department. It has filed only one report, due June 1971, and received by the department in February of this year, according to the Better Business Bureau.

Among the outstanding bills around town is $825 for rental of the premises, owned by Montreal Trust, and $1,040.30 for advertising.

The secretary says, that the rental agent acting for Montreal Trust was also unaware that the Birchs intended to leave town.

"They owed $825 and the agent told me he had personally told Mr. Birch that nothing could be removed from the studio."

Regosin, or in this case, Regal, has told at least one of his creditors he intends to sell the Victoria company.

Told that the Times intended to contact Regosin in Tucson to check this and other facts, the secretary requested that the matter of her salary also be raised.

A telephone interview with Regosin today was brief and uninformative.

Asked, why, if he inteded to sell the business, he had the studio effects bundled off to Arizona, Regosin retorted:

"I don't have to tell you, it's none of your business."

He gave the same answer when he was asked if he intends to honor his customers' accounts and why he didn't use his real name for the Victoria operation.

Customers Embarrassed

All the studio's customers contacted asked that their names not be used because they were embarrased or didn't want to appear stupid in front of their friends.

One woman, who said she "wouldn't like her daughter to know how foolish she had been" said she was luckier than most. She had only paid "between $5,000 and $6,000" because she had refused to sign a contract.

Asked if money was ever refunded to those who had signed contracts, the secretary said the contract didn't allow for refunds unless the customer could produce a signed statement by his or her doctor, saying they were physically incapable of taking the lessons.

She also said that there was a stipulation that any such refunds be given to an "assigned charitable organization" rather than the individual.

Some of the studio's customers have overcome their temerity and lodged complaints with the Better Business Bureau.

Licence No Protection

Managing director Bill Tindall says that, of these, the amounts involved range from $842 to $8,051.

He said the problem of recovering money spent for services not received would be difficult if, as he believed, FADS Holdings Ltd. handled its own financing or used a finance company in the United States.

Tindall said "The unfortunate thing is that many of these people are very reluctant to come forward because they feel embarassed."

Tindall, a city alderman, says that lack of teeth in legislation contributes to the danger of innocent people getting hurt.

"We're sadly lacking at the local level when it comes to granting trade licenses. Basically, it's a revenue-producing department and there is little protection for the taxpayer at that level. We should have power to require bonding, proof of qualifications and financial statements."

Tindall says municipalities do not have this power under the Municipal Act.

"The only way we can cure this situation is at the provincial level," he says.

Sidney Firechief Rejected

Sidney firemen say they cannot accept the appointment made by town council this week of a Central Saanich man as Sidney's first paid fire chief.

"We have nothing against Don Facey, the appinted chief, as a person," said Bill Mason, president of Sidney Firemen's Association. "We are concerned, however, about the manner in which he was hired."

According to Mason, the council is bound by its own bylaw to ask the fire wardens' committee for recommendations on hiring and firing by department personnel.

Although, the association was aware of the position being advertised, said Mason, there was no attempt made by council to consult the fire wardens' committee on the hiring of a chief.

The fire wardens' committee contains two representatives of the Firemens' Association.

Facey, former chief of Central Saanich fire department, was picked from 20 applicants at an in-camera meeting of Sidney Council Monday.

Mason said the association had notified Facey of their reaction.

Mayor Stan Dear said after an emergency meeting of council Friday night that he would make no comment on the matter at this time.

Questioned this morning, Facey refused to comment on the firemens' position.

The Collector

One of the more than 100 antique collectors and bargain seekers who attended an auction this morning at Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped subjects a teapot to scrutiny. Among the items sold were steamer trunks, crewelwork drapes, photo albums, antique dolls and miner's scales, made expressly for the California gold fields. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Frampton Seeks Municipal Probe

Victoria Ald. Percy Frampton sent a letter Friday to the provincial Inspector of Municipalities, asking him to investigate allegations that Mayor Peter Pollen "has been involved in transactions which may be contrary to the Municipal Act."

Frampton says as senior alderman he has viewed the charges "with some concern," particularly those concerning Pollen's involvement in leasing the Simon Leiser Building on Yates Street to the Capital Region District board, and sales of vehicles to the city by the Peter Pollen Ford Company.

"If these charges are untrue, then I would like to clear the name of Mayor Pollen and the city of Victoria," Frampton states.

"If the charges are true, then I trust that you, as the Inspector of Municipalities, would take whatever action was necessary."

Frampton, as an alternate director on the regional board, says that meanwhile the municipal affairs department should not approve the new lease on the Simon Leiser Building "until you have fully ascertained the validity, or otherwise, of the actions leading up to the drawing of the lease."

The specific allegations mentioned in the letter are among five raised Tuesday by lawyer Ian Stewart, following statements by Pollen concerning himself and his land dealings in James Bay at the time Stewart was an alderman.

Pollen answered the charges at a press conference Thursday, denying he had acted improperly.

He said his firm had engaged in transactions with the city while he was an alderman, but he had made "full disclosure" at the time and complied with requirements of the Municipal Act.

On the Simon Leiser Building, Pollen said it was owned by a non-profit foundation of which he was a member but that he had no personal interest in the lease or the building.

16% Hike for Firemen

Victoria firemen will receive nearly a 16 per cent wage increase over 21 months in a new contract recommended for approval by Victoria city council Friday.

In releasing the details of the wage settlement today, Fred (Whitey) Severson, president of local 730 of the Victoria Fire Fighters Union, said Victoria firemen will still receive $30 a month less than their Vancouver counterparts.

The contract includes a 6.89 per cent increase for the last nine months of 1972, a 7 per cent increase for the first 10 months of 1973 and an additional 1.3 per cent increase on Nov. 1, 1973.

The increase will bring the basic rate for a first class firefighter to $950 a month.

Additional benefits in the new contract, which is retroactive to April, 1972, include a service pay increase of $5 a month after five years of service; an overtime clause which calls for time-and-a-half in wages for overtime, and agreement on an in-service training program.

Mayor Peter Pollen said today city council agreed to recommend acceptance of the new contract at an unscheduled meeting Friday afternoon following a meeting of the four core municipalities which discussed joint bargaining.

Pollen declined to comment on the earlier meeting, saying only that is was "productive" but no agreement on regional bargaining of municipal contracts was made.

The idea of joint regional bargaining has been considered by the core municipalities for several years.

Severson said the union, which met with city negotiators a total of 17 times over the eight-month bargaining period, had ratified the new contract last week.

City council responded to the proposed contract last Monday however, by calling for the joint municipal meeting to reintroduce discussions of regional bargaining.

"After discussing this with the other municipalities," Pollen said, "the council decided the best thing to do was recommend approving the new contract."

Pollen said the contract would probably be officially approved at the next regular city council meeting.

30 Cents Per Hour For School Trustees

School trustees receive about 30 cents an hour for their work, incumbent trustee Walter Donald told an all-candidates meeting Thursday night.

"I think the public's getting a pretty good bargain," he said, citing over 150 school board meetings throughout the year.

Donald said he was running for the board because he was concerned about students who are getting "turned off" with school.

He added he was also interested in improving both communications between teachers and trustees and the student-teacher ratio.

HOSPITAL VOTE STILL ON

The chairman of the capital regional hospital board said today he has no knowledge of provincial government plans to shelve a $22 million building referendum planned for next March.

Art Young was responding to a Colonist story today which said the province will delay the referendum and has asked for a review of figures to produce the proposed spending totals.

The referendum will seek regional ratepayers' approval to bring up to date acute care facilities, mostly at Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals.

Voters will be asked to approve long-term borrowing for 40 per cent of the cost, with the province paying the balance.

Young said that discussions with the government so far have indicated it is agreeable to the March referendum provided the spending proposals put before the voters are flexible.

"If we can't go to referendum," said Young, "the government must provide some interim financing because we just can't wait any longer for acute care needs."

Pilgrimage to Victoria the Beautiful

WHEN WE LIVED IN VICTORIA, our idea of a holdiay was to get out of the city. Now the situation is reversed. As country dwellers perched above an up-Island beach, we point our car south when a change of scene is indicated.

Last week brought one of those occasions. We convinced ourselves that the city could best supply some of the items on our list of needs and wants. A pocket-sized bird book, for instance, with really good color plates. Short rubber boots of a particular type and make to replace the pair I wore out on the beaches.

There was Christmas shopping to be done, and it would be just as well if we got after it early. And anyway, we wanted a trip.

By happy coincidence, a cheque for a magazine article turned up in our mail. Prudence dictated that we squirrel this sending away, and we deliberated for all of 10 seconds. Then, with minimum of further delay, we started off down the Island Highway.

The creeks that were showing their bones when we last drove south — Cougar, Rosewall, Waterloo and the rest — hustled under their bridges with a strong brown flow. Deciduous trees that had fluanted bright colors in the earlier fall now stood bare, and occasional highway signs carried wintry warnings about snow plows and snow tires chains and sanding trucks.

But winter, we hoped, was still a southeaster or two distant, and we wound down off the Malahat in soft grey weather.

When we lived in Victoria, we took the city pretty much for granted. Coming in as visitors, we found our impressions sharpened.

Here was a city of quality — beautiful, very clean, and much larger than we'd realized. Whether by good luck or good planning or a combination of both, it has escaped the lamentable clutter, the look of being flung down all in a heap to grow any old way, which marks so many North American centres.

(From our years as residents, I'm also aware that Victoria owes much to the unparalleled ferocity of its inhabitants when they feel that their amenities are threatened. If Vancouver in its formative years had been blessed with such zealous watchdogs, Big Smoky mightn't be the ill-planned mess it is today.)

As visitors, however, we soon became keenly aware that downtown Victoria has one lack which should be remedied while time remains.

It needs pedestrian malls in its core, and should set about getting them even at the cost of more city-operated parking garages and a re-arranged downtown traffic pattern.

So to our shopping, an endeavor at which I do not shine. Men in general lack the stamina and the specialized hunting instinct that women bring to a day of store-hopping.

We did Douglas Street. ("Why don't you put the little bags in the big bag?" my dear one suggested. "That way, you won't be so likely to lose anything.")

We did Government Street, also Yates and Fort. ("No, it's too soon to stop for coffee. Don't tell me you're tired already!")

Part of the answer, I suspect, is that shopping possesses therapeutic values for a woman that it lacks for a man. This thought occurred to me while I hefted a nice little chain saw with interest but no present intent.

The chain saw is one of the items on our someday list, a compilation that has acquired a healthy length. Come to think of it, a reasonable gap between wanting and getting exercises a therapy of its own. . . .

"You do keep straying," Win said cheerfully from behind me. "Let's have that coffee now. Then we'll go look for your rubber boots."

We are home again from a junket which is a seasonal rite for many up-Islanders — so many, in fact, that they provide Victoria with a lucrative sub-tourist trade. We made a considerable dint in our Christmas shopping, and I'm glad to report that all's well with the bird book.

This country cousin absentmindedly left it on the store counter after checking the life-style of the redthroated loon, but it turned up safe in our mailbox the other morning.

NEW ADMINISTRATOR of business for the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria is 34-year-old Allen Houghton, former Ontario newspaper publisher. The new position was created after art gallery attendance in Victoria rose 30 per cent last year.

Nicholson 'Satisfactory'

Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson will probably be released Sunday from St. Paul's Hospital, Vancouver, a hospital spokesman said today. Nicholson entered hospital Monday night after collapsing with a lung infection at a private dinner. He is now in satisfactory condition.

FCS Directors Vote To Open Meetings

The board of directors of the Family and Children's Service has voted to open meetings to the public for a six-month trial period.

A statement from executive director Gordon Wright says the board believes the public should have the opportunity to know more about the $3 million program of social services it operates in Greater Victoria.

These include neighborhood family counselling and child welfare teams, foster care and adoption programs, group homes, residential treatment services, day care centres and homes and intensive services for delinquent youth.

The service's operating funds come from the federal and provincial governments.

Board meetings are usually held on the fourth Monday of each month at 1627 Fort, starting at 7:30 p.m. This month the meeting will be held Dec. 18 at the same location and time.

Experts, by 16 to 12, Pick Ticats

By MAURICE SMITH

Special to the Times

HAMILTON — If you're one of those people who puts a great deal of faith in public opinion polls, then the Grey Cup is due to sojurn in Hamilton for the next year.

Approaching a cross section of experts and personalities here for Sunday's football classic from both the east and west, the voting went in favor of the Tiger-Cats by a margin of 16 to 12, actually much closer than had been anticipated.

While regional loyalties always show up in a poll of this kind, there were quite a few westerners who didn't allow their hearts to rule their heads and consequently predicted an eastern victory.

One of these was Earl Lunsford, general manager of the Blue Bombers. "I'm afraid," said Oakie, "that I have to like Hamilton. I think they have a little more offence than Saskatchewan. I also thing they'll have difficulty in containing Chuck Ealey."

Gordon Grant, newly appointed sports editor of the Canadian Press, national news gathering service, liked Hamilton 27 to 17.

But Monty Charness of Toronto and the rival United Press International, saw it the other way. "Saskatchewan should win 20-14. I think the field goal will play an important role and Jack Abendschan won't feel the pressure as much as Sunter. Also, they have the more experienced quartergack."

Jack Koffman, sports columnist Ottawa Citizen: "Hamilton should win by a touchdown."

Ronnie Stewart, former halfback with Ottawa: "I have to like Saskatchewan because of Lancaster."

Andy O'Brien, Weekend Magazine: "Saskatchewan should beat the Ticats 26-21. I've picked the last three winners, and I'm sure this will make it four."

Jack Wells, sports commentator CTV Winnipeg: "Hamilton's got a fellow by the name of Wells on their team. They just can't lose."

Milt Dunnell, sports columnist Toronto Star: "Hamilton will win 22-18 mainly because they are playing at home. It's a little different playing here than anywhere else in Canada."

Jim Proudfood, sports editor Toronto Star: "George Reed, the irresistible force will lead Saskatchewan to a 21-10 victory."

Bill Good, sports commentator Vancouver: "Saskatchewan will take it by two touchdowns."

Ernie Afganis CBC sports commentator, Edmonton: "I like Saskatchewan by a touchdown."

Jim Hunt, sports voice of CKEY, Toronto: "Hamilton 28-21."

Gord Walker, sports writer Toronto Globe and Mail: "The Ticats, 28-18."

Rogers Lehew, manager Calgary Stampeders: "I've never picked a winner yet, so I'm calling Hamilton by three points."

Hal Walker, sports editor Calgary Herald: "The Roughriders 27-21."

Maurice Smith, sports editor Winnipeg Free Press: "My record is almost as bad as Rogers Lehew. Lancaster and Reed should be good enough to bring about a 24-17 victory for the Riders."

Hockey Diversified: Some Pucks to Remember

Things I never knew before about hockey pucks:

- There is such a thing as puck appeal.
- No puck is soul-less. Every puck has a character all its own.
- A chipped, used puck soon will become more valuable than a freshly frozen new one.
- "Plateau pucks" will shortly be the newest things in prized collector's items.

You've probably caught some of the action on TV, and wondered where all the pucks went after each NHL goal was scored.

That's when the linesman darts into the goal, snatches up the puck, and hopefully outraces a goal scorer to the timekeeper's bench.

There an unnamed officiial accepts delivery, labels the puck, noting place, date, number of goal for the player, time, assists if any, and other pertinent information that every used puck should be famous for.

These positively identified pucks are then shipped off to a firm called Hockey Diversified, which is in Parry Sound, Ont. There they receive extra-special treatment. They are X-rayed under a secret process that will disclose facts about pucks hitherto unknown in the annals of hockey. This is to prevent any wrong pucks getting on the wrong plaques. After which, these pucks will be offered for sale to a palpitating public.

"Yes, sir, I have a Bobby Schmautz. What Year?"

The Plague Will Reveal All

Yes, used hockey pucks are about to be a curious commodity of the age, and this year's crop will be known as the Registered Goal Collectors Series, 1972-73.

The idea is the brain child of a Dr. Reg Wright, and Jim Rennie, a magazine editor, who decided between them that there's more than old rubber in used pucks.

So they approached the NHL, and offered to buy up all the goal-scoring pucks for a sum that is as yet undisclosed, and through the next five years. The NHL snapped at the offer. This would pay for new pucks which come at 49 cents. And if two guys thought they could make a buck, on a puck perhaps it might help the NHL image too.

At an average of about six goal-scoring pucks a game, for 624 regular season games, plus playoffs, the people of Parry Sound will soon be up to their bicuspids in used hockey pucks.

Dr. Wright, you see, is a dentist, and what his X-ray machine will determine about used pucks, only the plaque on which the puck will be mounted, will reveal.

Then there are "plateau pucks", the 100 and 220-goal types, the rookie's first-ever goal, the Stanley Cup game winner. These will be returned mounted, and free of charge to the player who scored.

'Same as Brad, One Leg at a Time'

Gee, at this rate, Dr. Wright and Rennie could quickly become the merchandising marvels of the age. The possibilities for expansion are endless.

How about Jean Beliveau's old shoelaces? The buyer could truthfully say: "Look! I lace up my boots the same way Beliveau did."

Why not a lock from Bobby Hull's head? A pre-transplant would be a find indeed. An exclusive! The matchup with the present Hull crop could come later.

Or Brad Park's pants? A fellow could "put em on, same as old Brad, one leg at a time."

Some oldtimers might like a piece of Eddie Dorohoy's lip, fastest in the west.

It was free in the old days, such as when Dorohoy a brash, 19-year-old rookie, was leaving Montreal after failing to change Rocket Richard's style. Handing his practice sweater to a Montreal official, Dorohoy said: "Here, you may want to retire this."

A Jacques Plante mask might turn out to be an "original." Broken hockey sticks could be salvaged (I've got an autographed Roger Leger in my basement).

Or perhaps a little something for the trophy room. Like a Colin Kilburn Cup. Suitably hung. Ah, but for the piece de resistance, here's something that would fetch a fair price.

An Alan Eagleson finger, no less. Preferably the one he used to salute the world with in Moscow. Or even a reasonable facsimile.

Appropriately mounted, of course.

Unexpected Slap From the Depths

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a night for upsets in the World Hockey Association Friday as Ottawa Nationals, Philadelphia Blazers and Minnesota Fighting Saints defeated higher-ranking clubs.

The Nationals, fifth in the Eastern Division, downed the West leader Winnipeg Jets 4-3, the sixth-place Blazers in the East defeated second-ranking New England Whalers 5-3 and Minnesota beat Alberta Oilers 6-4 to move into second spot in the West, one point ahead of Alberta.

In one other game, Los Angeles Sharks downed Chicago Cougars 5-3.

Philadelphia, winning only its fifth game in 22 starts, showed signs of improvement with the return of goalie Bernie Parent and increased scoring power by playing coach Johnny McKenzie.

Parent, playing his first game since being sidelined by a foot injury Oct. 25, stopped 32 shots on the Blazers nets and McKenzie provided a goal and two assists to lead the attack.

Plans Shelved For Expansion

HAMILTON (CP) — The Canadian Football League has no plans for expansion to the United States today, but what happens Feb. 8?

That question remained after the CFL executive committee shelved the expansion issue at meetings Friday and league commissioner Jake Gaudaur said:

"It's off the agenda at this meeting. However, that isn't to say that it won't come up at the next meeting which will be held on the second Thursday in February."

Notices of motion recommending expansion to the U.S. and a franchise for New York businessman Robert Schmertz were withdrawn as was a third notice to consider expansion in Canada, Gaudaur told a news conference following Friday's meetings.

The notices of motion, placed before the committee last month in Winnipeg, were withdrawn after an hour's discussion because the owners agreed "there was conclusive indication that there wasn't sufficient evidence to fake steps at this time," Gaudaur said.

He did not elaborate, but the move could be taken to mean the CFL owners are waiting to see what steps the federal government might take in efforts to keep the league in Canada.

John Munro, then federal health minister, met two weeks ago with Gaudaur and John Bassett, Toronto Argonauts owner who was one of the prime movers behind the motion to expand southward.

Munro said following those meetings the government would take any steps open to it to prevent the CFL going into the U.S.

Gaudaur denied that Munro, who was replaced in a cabinet shuffle this week by Marc Lalonde, was making any open threats.

"I would like to make it clear at this time, for Munro's sake and Bassett's, that is not the case. Munro did say, with a conversational background, what steps the government could take to preserve the CFL. I can tell you, though, that there was no threat atmosphere.

"Munro, for instance, thinks we should expand to Halifax but that is academic. The stadium there seats only seven or eight thousand so you would not have a viable operation there."

Gaudaur said he hopes to have the same co-operation with Lalonde who takes over as the minister responsible for sport.

Dealing Day in Baseball

HONOLULU (AP) — The annual winter baseball meetings wound up swinging Friday.

Dealing as if there was no tomorrow—which there wasn't — several teams squeezed under the interleague midnight trading deadline and made big scores.

Philadelphia Phillies and Cleveland Indians ignited the trading explosion with a four-player deal and by the time things were finished, a total of seven swaps were made in less than five hours involving 22 players.

The Phillies shipped outfielders Roger Freed and Oscar Gamble to the Indians for outfielder Del Unser and third baseman Terry Wedgewood at noon.

In quick succession, these deals followed:

—New York Mets traded outfielder Dave Marshall to San Diego Padres for pitcher Al Severinsen.

—Cincinnati Reds traded utilityman Hal McRae and pitcher Wayne Simpson to Kansas City Royals for pitcher Roger Nelson and outfielder Richie Scheinblum.

—The Reds purchased outfielder Larry Stahl from San Diego Padres.

—Oakland Athletics traded first baseman Mike Epstein to Texas for pitcher Horacio Pina and also gave the Rangers outfielder Brant Alyea to complete an earlier deal.

—Atlanta Braves traded catcher Earl Williams and shortstop Taylor Duncan to Baltimore Orioles for pitchers Pat Dobson and Roric Harrison, second baseman Dave Johnson and catcher Johnny Oates.

—The Indians obtained second baseman Tom Ragland from the Rangers for pitcher Vince Colbert.

Friday's crush topped off a record week of trading activity that produced 19 deals involving 68 players. Only three of the 24 major league teams failed to complete a trade—Boston Red Sox, Milwaukee Brewers and Montreal Expos.

Pair Returns To Help Cats Tackle Bruins

Winger Al McLaren and defenceman Ed Boucha are scheduled to return to Victoria's lineup tonight when the Cougars meet New Westminster Bruins in a Western Canada Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

Game time is 8:30.

Both McLaren and Boucha missed last Tuesday's game against Regina, which the Pats won, 5-4. Boucha was sidelined by a leg injury while the speedy McLaren informed Cougars he was considering retiring.

Victoria manager Eric Bishop said McLaren has been persuaded to reconsider his decision.

The Bruins, who defeated Cougars 7-6 in their only previous appearance at Memorial Arena, return as co-leaders of the Western Division.

Coach Ernie McLean's squad was forced to share the lead after Calgary Centennials defeated Brandon Wheat Kings 7-2 in one of three games Friday.

Calgary's victory, sparked by centre Mike Rogers' five-point performance, moved the Cents into a tie for first. Rogers collected two goals and three assists while Doug Sweeting, obtained from Vancouver Nats earlier this week, also counted twice.

Glen Burdon's unassisted goal in the third period gave Regina Pats a 2-2 tie with Saskatoon Blades while at Swift Current, brilliant goaltending by Frank Turnbull helped the Winnipeg Jets to a 7-5 victory over the Broncos.

It's One Season Arnie Can Forget

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Aging Arnold Palmer dropped out of the final tournament of his most frustrating season Friday while Jack Nicklaus prepared an assault on some unscaled golfing heights.

"It was just pretty frustrating all around," the 43-year-old Palmer said after his 77 failed to qualify him for the final two rounds of the $150,000 Walt Disney World Open.

He hit one in the water for a double bogey and three-putted four of his last seven greens in the final tournament of the season. It was the third time this season that he'd failed to qualify, and it was only the third time in more than 100 tournaments.

While Nicklaus was in his customary spot atop the standings with a pair of four-underpar 68s for a 136 total, Palmer closed out the first season of his career without winning a title. He had had an unbroken string going back to his rookie year of 1955.

"I ended the season like I started it—playing bad," said the winner of some 60 tour titles. His 146 total was just one over the qualifying score.

Nicklaus, already winner of six crowns including the titles in the U.S. Open and the Masters this season, has won a record $290,542. He could finish as low as third to become the first man past the $300,000 figure for a season.

He held a one-stroke lead over George Archer, who blew sole possession of the lead when he took a double-bogey six on his 18th hole in Friday's round.

Archer had a 71 for 137.

More Than One Leibel

THE CURLING SCENE

By Jim Crerar

When you mention the name Leibel around Victoria, most curlers tend to think of Gary. It's understandable since has been a top competitor on the was with Tony Gutoski's rink in the 1958 Brier.

But Gary isn't the only Leibel with an interesting background. HIs dad, Joe, appeared in the 1969 Seagram Stone finals for curlers 50 and over.

He threw lead rock on Gord Moore's rink that lost in a playoff in Hamilton to Alfie Phillips Sr. of Toronto.

When you're playing lead, of course, you must be a strong sweeper and in Joe's case it's no mean accomplishment.

He has only one arm..

"I can sweep as much as ever now," Joe, 60 said. "I have a short broom with a special atttachment that anchors to my artificial arm and I do all the work with my right arm."

* * *

Joe lost his left arm above the elbow in an industrial accident in 1955, three years after he began curling.

"It took a couple of years to adjust, he explained. "I had to get my balance on delivery. I don't hold a broom. I just use my artificial arm for balance."

At the same time, he had to build up the strength in his right arm for sweeping. That took about two years as well.

Joe is back in the Seagram Stone this weekend at Esquimalt Sports Centre for the South Island zone playdowns involving 17 rinks. He is throwing third rock with Laurie Perlette's Victoria Curling Club entry that also includes lead John Bruce and second George Becker.

Perlette was the second on that 1969 rink in Hamilton along with third Dick Pick.

Moore also is in the Esquimalt playoff and was among the early-line favorites along with Victoria clubmate Gordon Walker, who won the B.C. title last year but has a completely new rink this time.

Draws continue today at 2 and 7 p.m. and conclude Sunday at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Four rinks qualify for the Island finals in Comox in January.

* * *

HACK LINES —Here's one to confuse you: Winner of the Monday Nighters' shorty bonspiel at Esquimalt, which was held last Saturday, was Bob Ferguson's rink which curls in the Langford 91 club on Sundays . . . Howie Ward's rink, including third Audrey Johnson, second Robbie Dunn and lead Maureen Milgram, took the Seagram Stone press invitational shorty at Esquimalt. .

Zel Moore of the Esquimalt Afternoon Ladies' League won her club's women's invitational against rinks from Greater Victoria . . . Only undefeated league rink at Esquimalt is Andy Owens' foursome in the Dockyard League . . . Other league leaders are Norm Martin, Winter Club; Zel Moore, Afternoon Ladies; Kay Fugle, Thursday Housewives, and Darwin Heap, Highrock Junior High.

There's still room for two or three more rinks in the annual Playland Men's Open Bonspiel starting next Thursday evening and running through to Sunday afternoon.

Former Champs Fall In First-Draw Games

Former provincial champions went skidding Friday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre as opening rocks were tossed in the south Vancouver Island senior men's curling playdowns.

Gordie Moore, who skipped rinks to the national final in 1969 and 1971, was nipped 8-7 in a tension-packed struggle against Victoria Curling Club mate Gord Fuller.

Gordon Walker, who reached the Canadian final last season, also went down to defeat in another contest between VCC rinks. Wayne Winkler, vice-skip in the B.C. rink in the Seagram Stone event at Prince Albert, tripped his former skip 9-5 with assistance from Elmer Hoffman, another former member of the Walker rink.

Laurie Perlette, with the Moore quartet that came within a playoff contest of the national crown in 1969, was also a Friday-night victim. Perlette was trimmed 12-1 by George Baird of Lake Cowichan.

John Innes of VCC came out on top in the other first-draw game, defeating the Racquet Club crew of Stan James 7-4.

Play was continuing today and winds up Sunday in the 17-rink competition that will send four squads into the Island final at Courtenay next month.

Senior curlers in the Island's north zone started today at Port Alberni in their 12-rink chase for the other four berths in the Island event.

The provincial final is scheduled for Kitimat, Jan. 29 and 30.

Totem Semis Reached

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three rinks from Greater Vancouver and one from the Fraser Valley have qualified for the semi-final in the annual totem bonspiel, which concludes on Sunday.

Herb Millham of Vancouver, Jack Tucker of Richmond, Leo Hebert of Vancouver and Jake Block of Abbotsford reached the semifinals with two victories each in Friday's play. Block defeated defending champion Brock Giles, 11-2, on Thursday.

The four rinks have 5-0 records.

Block meets Millham in one semi-final tonight while Hebert plays Tucker in the other. Winners advance to the championship game Sunday night.

Block won his quarter-final match, 7-6, over former provincial champion Jack Arnett of Vancouver while Millham advanced with a 6-5 win over Don Morely of Merritt.

Hebert downed Clem McCloskey of North Vancouver, 9-2, and Tucker won, 11-6, over Seattle's Ed Risling in other quarter-final games.

Earlier in the day, Arnett beat Surrey's Tom Campbell, 8-6, and Block edged Al Sharp of Delta, 7-6. Hebert slipped past Chuck Kennedy of Surrey, 10-9, while Tucker won, 8-4, over Joe Cameron of North Vancouver.

Play continues today and Sunday in the $5,000 bonspiel's five other events.

At Hamilton an all-Western final was set for today in the Grey Cup bonspiels's first event after Barry Fry and Terry Braunstein, both of Winnipeg, emerged with victories in Friday's semi-finals.

Fry advanced with a 9-3 victory over Bill House of Hamilton and Braunstein won his final berth with a 6-4 decision over Ted Brown of Kingston, Ont.

Fry and Braunstein now battle for a first prize of a four-wheel-drive vehicle for each member of their rinks.

Among other losers in the first-event semi-finals were Ron Northcott of Calgary, Hap Mabey of Moncton, N.B., and Hec Gervais and Matt Baldwin of Edmonton, all veterans of national championship play.

Lansdowne Advances

Lansdowne advanced to the Lower Vancouver Island junior high school rugby final with a victory Friday.

Dan Hemmingway scored two tries and kicked two penalty goals in Lansdowne's 18-12 win over St. Michael's University School. Lansdowne is scheduled to meet Mt. Newton in the lower Island final Tuesday.

Dave Dalziel and Michael Lau scored the tries for the host St. Michael's team and Reg More booted both converts.

The Island final is slated Dec. 8 at Cowichan.

Favored Pairs Post Victories

Ladies were at Brentwood Community Hall and men were competing at the Racquet Club of Victoria today as play resumed in the three-day Racquet Club invitational badminton tournament.

First shots were fired Friday as favorites took charge in mixed doubles matches at the Racquet Club courts.

Judi and Bruce Rollick, the first-seeded pair from Vancouver, stroked their way to a 15-2, 15-8 decision over Sharn Fisher of Vancouver and Victoria's Murray Foubister.

Vancouver's second-ranked pair of Mimi Nilsson and Bert Fergus posted two victories, getting their second win by a 15-4, 15-8 count over the Portland duo of Marian Wolfe and DuaneM untz.

Another Vancouver combination, the third-ranked pair of Cathy Henry and John Hetherington, downed Victorians Joan Parlby and Herry Sadd 15-3, 15-2.

Singles semi-finals are scheduled this evening and doubles semis are slated for Sunday morning.

Sunday's events will all be played at the Racquet Club, with finals starting at 1 p.m.

ALL BLACKS BEAT WALES

CARDIFF, Wales — Five penalty goals by Joe Karam propelled New Zealand All Blacks to a 19-16 victory over Wales here today in a spectacular, bruising Rugby Union international match.

Trailing 13-3 at the intermission, Wales took charge in the second half and barely missed salvaging a draw when Phil Bennett, who had earlier kicked four penalty goals, missed a penalty attempt on the final play of the game.

Rondon Defeated

MADRID (AP) — Spanish heavyweight Jose Manuel Ibar Urtain outpointed former world light-heavyweight champion Vicente Rondon of Venzuela in a 10-round heavyweight bout Friday night.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Fine 380 in second game carried Don McIntosh to 946 triple and top of the heap in men's fivepin competition in eighth week of Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Other single-game scores in big series were 266 and 300, rolled in Legion League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

Rangers Falter, Blues Speed Up

By The Canadian Press

New York Rangers, hampered by injuries, are beginning to slow down in their bid for the National Hockey League East Division lead while St. Louis Blues are making a sudden move at joining the action in the West.

For the second time in as many games, the Rangers had to come from behind to gain a tie Friday night, finishing with a 3-3 score against California Golden Seals.

The Blues, meanwhile, came up with their third win in a row, downing Vancouver Canucks 6-2.

That moved the Blues to within four points of sixth-place Philadelphia Flyers in the West which might not sound impressive except for the fact that Flyers are only six points back of division leading Minnesota.

The Rangers, who lost defenceman Jim Neilson for an estimated three-week period Wednesday as they tied Los Angeles 2-2, now are winless in their last three games.

Neilson's injury, a broken bone in his right foot, was his second of the season, and the Rangers have also lost Brad Park and Ab DeMarco from the defensive lineup and forwards Ted Irvine and Bruce MacGregor for varying periods.

A power-play goal by Rod Gilbert late in the third period at California gave Rangers the tie with the Seals who trail the West Division with only five wins.

Vic Hadfield and Pete Stemkowski got the earlier goals for New York while Stan Weir led the Seals with two and Rick Smith got one.

At Vancouver, the Blues waited until the third period before going on a four-goal rampage. Jack Egers, with his second goal of the night, Chris Evans, Gary Sabourin and Floyd Thomson beat goalie Ed Dyck as the Blues outshot the Canucks 18-8 in the final 20 minutes.

Rookie Mike Lampman got the other Blues goal in the second period while Dale Tallon, playing his second game as a forward, and Bobby Lalonde scored for Vancouver.

Labs Snatch Tie Against Leaders

Butler Brothers barely held on against late charge by Labatts Friday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre to preserve their undefeated record in the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

After goals by Don Jones and Kerry Brewster had boosted to league leaders into a 2-0 lead in the opening period, Labatts rebounded with a two-goal surge in the final session.

Harvey Stevenson counted on a power play to trim the deficit and Bob Holness scored on a breakaway at 7:45 of the third period to pull Labs into the tie.

In Friday's other contest, Vern Neilson scored the last four goals for CFB Esquimalt Buccaneers to wrap up an 11-3 triumph over University of Victoria Norsemen.

Buccaneers scored six power-play goals and notched one tally while the Norsemen had a two-man advantage.

Pronghorns Pound Vikings

Just as expected, the University of Victoria basketball Vikings ran into Tollestrup trouble Fridy night.

Preparing for their two-game series against Lethbridge Pronghorns in the Canada West University Athletic Association basketball league, the Vikings were hoping to discover a system to contain Phil Tollestrup, considered by many as the country's top collegiate player.

They obviously didn't find the right system and the six-six Tollestrup, who joined the Pronghorns after four years at Brigham Young University, sparked Lethbridge to a 64-42 triumph Friday at the UVic gymnasium.

Big Phil pumped in 22 points and punished the Vikings under the boards, grabbing 14 rebounds.

Also produciig considerable pain for the Victorians was six-five centre Doug Kempt, who snatched 10 rebounds and scored 10 points.

It was the fourth win in five league starts for the Pronghorns and the third successive defeat after two victories for the Vikings, who were paced on attack by the 11-point shooting of Tom Holmes.

In another men's league contest at Edmonton, the last-place Alberta Golden Bears tripped the second-place UBC Thunderbirds 61-50.

While the Vikings had their losing streak extended, two other UVic clubs got back on the winning track Friday night with home-court triumphs.

Getting excellent results from a zone press defence anchored by Laurie Atkinson, and sparked on attack by Lorna McHattie's 13-point contribution, the Vikettes ended a two-game losing skein with a conquest of Lethbridge in a CWUAA women's league game.

UVic Jayvees survived a late charge by Vancouver College to also snap a two-game losing streak. Losing most of an 11-point lead in the final three minutes, the Jayvees nipped their rivals 68-66.

Jim Kupiak notched 22 points and Rich Jones collected 13 points and 13 rebounds for the Jayvees.

The women's teams clash again tonight at 6:30 and Vikings take another shot at the Pronghorns at 8:30.

Home Courts Best Bet For City Hoop Squads

Oak Bay Bays, Victoria Tyees, Belmont Braves and Mount Douglas Rams had a cozy evening at home, but it was a chilly Friday for Greater Victoria squads invading other centres in search of honors in high school boys' basketball competition.

Playing at Victoria High, the Bays overpowered Mennonite Educational Institute Eagles of Haney 66-51 to march into tonight's championship final of the annual inter-scholastic tournament.

Bays opened their bid in the six-team tourney Thursday by tripping New Westminister Hyaks 76-34 and finished the preliminary round-robin with a 2-0 record in Section II.

Winner of section I was being decided today.

Victoria High Totems rebounded from a Thursday defeat to down Port Alberni Chieftains 53-34.

In the Braves tournament at Belmont, the Braves turned on the scoring power to drub Nanaimo Hubsters 80-63 despite a sparkling, 30-point effort by Nanaimo's Scott Littlejohn. Clive Haas paced Belmont with 17.

Getting 12 points each from Doug Mosher and Rich Jones, the Rams rolled to 51-37 triumph over Queen Elizabeth of Surrey.

Coldest greeting for Victoria-area squads on the road was received by Mount View Hornets.

Competing in an invitational tourney at Prince George, the Hornets ran into heavy snow that may produce transportation problems for their trip home and they were also chilled on the court, taking a 63-42 thumping at the hands of the Prince George Polars.

Reynolds Roadrunners were bounced 68-38 at Chilliwack by Hope Mustangs in the opening round of the annual Mustang tournament.

At Courtenay, the host George P. Vanier Towhees got away to a fast start in their invitational tourney, clipping Esquimalt Dockers 47-38.

In another Towhee tourney contest, Claremont Spartans were nipped by Campbell River Tyees in a 37-33 thriller.

Huskies Extend Vikings' Famine

SASKATOON (CP) — University of Saskatchewan Huskies won their third straight Canada West intercollegiate hockey game Friday night downing winless University of Victoria Vikings, 7-2.

Bill Thompson and Ed Slywka each scored two goals to spark the Huskies who rained 63 shots on Murray Finlay. Phil Haugen, Ken Cross and Doug Mitchell added the other goals as the Huskies grabbed period leads of 2-0 and 5-1.

Dave Cousins and Jack Richardson replied for Victoria who suffered their seventh consecutive loss.

Huskies took eight of 12 minor penalties in the game. Finlay blocked a total of 56 shots including 22 in the final period. Devan Migneault made 21 saves in the Saskatchewan net.

The teams meet again this afternoon.

At Calgary, UBC Thunderbirds padded their first-place margin by defeating Calgary Dinosaurs 5-3 behind the two-goal performance of Bob Murray.

Second-place Alberta Golden Bears stepped out of the conference to humiliate Edmonton Oil Kings of the Western Canada Junior League 10-1. Gerry Hornby and Steve McKnight each sored two goals in a rough game marred by several fights.

Olympic Games Can Do Without Razzle-Dazzle

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

What the Olympic Games need now is more emphasis on athletic competition and less on razzle-dazzle.

That's the way Abby Hoffman of Toronto Olympic Club, a finalist in the women's 800-metre race at last summer's Olympics in Munich, sees it.

Miss Hoffman, Canada's premiere female half-miler and our top track and field performer this year, is among several top Canadian and U.S. runners competing in the women's 2.1-mile race and the men's 7.7-miler today.

Commenting on the killing of a half-dozen Israeli athletes by Arab guerrillas during last summer's Olympics, Miss Hoffman Friday night suggested it might not have happened if eyes of the world had not been focussed on the spectacle of the Games.

"As long as you have this huge festival, this big TV show, you're going to run the risk of these interlopers," she said.

Will athletes boycott the 1976 Games in Montreal because of a possible recurrence?

"I can't speak for anyone else, but I'm willing to take the risk," she said. "I go to New York to compete four times a year and I feel safer in the Olympic stadium than I do on 42nd street."

She feels part of the problem lies in North America's lack of understanding of amateur sport.

"In North America, people like the show so the media has to emphasize it," she said. "In Europe, they understand the athlete-vs-athletes concept. I personally would like to see less emphasis on the show and more attention paid to what the athletes are doing."

And while she doesn't advocate the abolition of the Olympics, Miss Hoffman feels that there are better forms of world competition from the athletes' standpoint.

"The ultimate in athletic performance would be achieved with world championships in each sport every two years," she suggested.

Security in Munich was reported to be air-tight, but Miss Hoffman disagrees.

"Everybody said the security in the Olympic Village was great, but it wasn't. There were lots of extra people there. We were harboring a few ourselves."

She doubted, however, that there would be attempts on athletes' lives in Montreal.

"I don't think they'd try that trick again," she said. "But they still could try to throw a bomb in the stadium or something like that."

Miss Hoffman feels the Olympics are worth having "but I, for one, would like to know exactly what Montreal has in mind.

"For example, I would not like to see a huge stadium in Montreal built for the Olympics, then given over to baseball or NFL football. Whatever is built should become the property of the community, not professional sports."

Montreal plans to turn the Olympic Village over to housing when the 1976 Games end.

"In Montreal, they don't need $400-a-month housing, as they built with Habitat for Expo '67," Miss Hoffman pointed out. "They need $125-a-month housing, so let's make sure that's what they provide."

What Do They Think While I'm Talking?

Perspectives and Prejudices

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

During my wartime army service I was once present in a company commander's office as he dealt with a charge against a young soldier. The accused had inhaled too much mild-and-bitter in the wet canteen the previous evening. He made a highly indelicate suggestion to the orderly corporal when that worthy had suggested that he return to his barracks. Later, after he had been lodged in the guardroom, he heaved a boot through a window.

"You, Smethley," snarled the major, "you have erred and strayed like a lost sheep. You have followed too much the devices and desires of your own heart. And there is no health in you. Seven days confinement to barracks, seven days loss of pay, and you'll pay for the window. Next case, sar'nt-major."

Later the major explained to me (I was then a callow lieutenant, just beginning to learn the ropes), "You see, Davidson, one can improve the shining hour even at those abominable compulsory church parades. One can get something from them, can't one?"

I have occasionally remembered that bristly major through the years since my becoming a minister. I sometimes wonder what the worshippers are thinking about during worship, what they get out of it and take home with them, what they are thinking about as I drone on.

I remember a pleasant lady who a couple of times at the church door told me that I had unnecessarily split an infinitive in my sermon that day. And she seemed almost gleeful the Sunday she reported to me that I had heinously dangled a participle. I comforted myself by thinking I was probably helping her to a little emotional satisfaction by providing her from time to time with opportunities to exercise her compulsion to detect and identify grammatical errors. But I learned later that she actually paid very close attention during my sermons and could remember many months later the point in them which at the time I had considered important.

Then then was the man who I knew would disagree with what I had said about capital punishment in a sermon. At the church door after the service he put out his hand and said with a smile, "Well, good morning anyway."

The response to my preaching I find most memorable occurred quite some years ago in a little rural church. As I bebgan the sermon an elderly lady sitting in a pew near the front of the church switched off her hearing-aid with a rather conspicuous flourish. Most of the congregation could see her, and they had no doubts about what she thought of me as a preacher. (A few days earlier I had said "No" when she invited me to sign the Stockholm Peace Appeal, which was a rather clever Communist gambit in the early days of the Cold War.) It was with great difficulty that I stumbled through that sermon and finished the service. I felt that there was no health in me.

African Christians on Uprise

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Will success spoil Christianity in Africa? A forthcoming report on churches in Kenya suggests that the problem is more acute than many clerics have believed.

Figures compiled for the first time in the Kenya Churches Handbook for 1972, to be published shortly, are expected to show twice as many church members as had been estimated and an unexpectedly deep church involvement in social development projects.

David B. Barrett, an aircraft designer turned Anglican missionary who helped prepare the handbook, says it's like that nearly everywhere in black Africa.

He says that the numerical growth of African Christianity has been phenomenal.

He estimates that the more than 100 million Christians on the continent are increasing at the rate of five per cent a year —double the population growth. By the year 2000, he says, African Christians could total 350 million and exceed the number of African Moslems for the first time.

The demand for thousands of additional churches, ministers and lay personnel, and church-aided agencies is overwhelming.

Some in the Roman Catholic church, the biggest Christian group in Africa, foresee a complete administrative breakdown within a generation, with the hierarchy becoming hopelessly decentralized.

"We had thought that the crisis lay between Christianity and anti-Christian forces, like Communism, but now we have an entirely unexpected crisis," Barrett said in an interview. "It's the exact opposite of the crisis of faith in the West. Growth is almost out of control.

"Africans are the most religious people in the world. Christianity is a religion of development and human rights and Africa was ripe for it."

Much of the growth has been within independent or separatist movements outside the historical church organizations. There are more than 5,000 such movements, including some 3,000 in South Africa, with a total membership of about 15 million. The largest is the Kimbanguist group in Zaire, which claims three million adherents.

African church leaders see the boom as foreshadowing the development of Christianity from a largely white and Western-centred religion into a religion dominated numerically, at least, by non-white, Third World peoples. Some predict that Western Christians will double during the 20th century to 800 million but Third World Christians will increase from 67 million in 1900 to more than one billion.

Churches in Kenya sponsor hospitals, schools, mobile clinics, adult training courses, child care and home economic centres, village polytechnical schools, marketing co-operatives, credit societies and even beekeeping projects.

House to Meet

BONN (AP) — West Germany's newly-elected lower house of parliament will hold its first meeting in mid-December to reinstate Willy Brandt as chancellor, a government spokesman announced Friday. Chief government spokesman Conrad Ahlers said the constitutive assembly of the Bundestag, where Brandt's Social Liberal coalition commands a 272-to-224 seat lead over the Christian Democrat opposition, will take place Dec. 13.

'THE RULING CLASS'

Jelly Beans and Snow Jobs

A Film Review

By WAYNE HARDING

Could there be something fraudulent about Peter Medak's new film, The Ruling Class?

Of course we must be cautious. There may be deep meanings here. There may be wisemen in these very aisles who see the metaphysical significances. Certainly everyone looks quite satisfied and self-assured, if a little weary, as they trudge out to the street.

Is it possible an accomplished group of film-makers, dramatists and actors are actually engaged in a snow job?

It may be sadly true. It may indeed be that snow jobs have become the name of the game.

Take, for instance, playwright Peter Barnes' own description of The Ruling Class (which he wrote for the stage and then adapted for the film). In his program notes to the play, he says it is a comedy "about the withdrawal of light from the world, the obstinacy of defeat and asks the question, is God a 10,000-foot tall, pink jelly bean?"

It may all be very meaningful to a culture whose mentors are drug-atrophied children and whose patrons are middle-aged groupies who hang on every inarticulate utterance of the masters lest they appear beyond the fashionable pale.

The Ruling Class has something to do with a madman who believes he is the living God who becomes the 14th Earl of Gurney and is badly manipulated by insidious family politics.

It is a surreal statement, one supposes. But Medak and Barnes have, for their own reasons, chosen to set it in a very naturalist style with brilliantly real stately homes and clearly definable personalities which create some very pleasant pictures at first but only adds to the confusion when, in the end, the film rushes to its surreal end.

Peter O'Toole, as the mad Earl, over-acts terribly. Occasionally one feels he is still playing Lawrence of Arabia — which he might just as well do because he has been given a pointless role in this film.

There are a few bright moments. Barnes has written some witty dialogue. Arthur Lowe, as the faithful butler who goes on a permanent toot after inheriting 30,000 pounds, is a lot of fun. There are some digs at the British aristocracy — the kind of iconoclasm the British love.

But no number of bright moments make up for the structural errors of the film.

There is no story development, although there is some sort of climax — the return to sanity and the evil of sanity when the Earl kills his wife. But, as there is no structural progression to that point, it comes as just a cruel aside. Beyond that point, it is simply a mad scramble to get out of the whole mess.

Quake Hits Again

ASCOLI PICENO, Italy (AP) — A sharp earth tremor Friday hit this ancient city, already badly shaken by 38 quakes during the last week. The latest quake, registering between five and six points on the 12-point Mercalli scale, caused windows to rattle and cracked walls of old buildings in this town 120 miles northeast of Rome.

John McMahon Dies at 67

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Augustine McMahon, president and chairman of Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd., has died in hospital after a lengthy illness. He was 67.

He was born in Moyie, in the Kootenay region, and attended the University of British Columbia in the early 1920s. He spent 25 years after graduation as an investment dealer, president of the firm McMahon and Burns, which was sold to McLeod, Young, Weir and Co. in 1953.

McMahon, whose older brother Frank, 70, is chairman emeritus of another gas pipeline company, Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., was also a director of B.C. Telephone Co. and the Bank of B.C. He founded Inland Natural Gas in 1952.

ENTERTAINMENT GUIDE

THE WIG & DICKIE CABARET at The Wilson Motor Inn, 850 Blanshard St., is the place where Music, Fun and Laughter start but never end. If you haven't seen George McDowall and The Lads then you have missed the best entertainment in Victoria. It's just like an English Inn where young and old gather in the evenings to join in the singing, have some chuckles and a good time. See it for yourself. For reservations call The Wig & Dickie at 385-6787. Open Tues.-Sat., from 8:30 p.m.

The Old Bailey Beefeater is THE PLACE for those who like to sink their teeth into a succulent thick slice of prime rib smothered in its own natural juices. The complete dinner is a delight including hors d'oeuvres, tossed salad, a small loaf of bread, garlic or regular butter, baked potato and a selection of taste tempting cheeses for dessert. And believe it or not the price is only $4.50 or just $3.75 if you order the English cut. Try this the next time you're going out for dinner. You'll love the English mood of the authentic Old Bailey Beefeater at The Wilson Motor Inn, Blanshard at Courtenay.

Bring Back the Singers

audrey johnson

Singing is at once the most complicated and sensitive of art forms and the most natural musical utterance of any.

That is why it seems remarkable to me that in Victoria it should be so neglected by the music-conscious public.

Choral singing has a substantial and faithful following but that's quite a different matter.

What concerns me is the apparent indifference to the soloist and the solo repertoire which contains much of the most beautiful music ever written and is immense in its range of imagination, emotional content and style.

* * *

There are the hundreds of exquisite songs of Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, Wolf, Faure, Poulenc, Benjamin Britten, Vaughan Williams, Michael Head, to mention only a few.

A great outpouring of genius that has no chance to become even fractionally familiar because from year's end to year's end it is hardly ever performed locally.

And then there are the singers. There are at least a dozen men and women in this city endowed with fine voices who are musically highly literate and technically competent.

Where and when do they have the opportunity to display their art?

Now and then — for the fortunate ones perhaps as much as two or three times a year — there will be a studio or other small hall recital. Or maybe some choir will want soloists for an oratorio or other major work.

Mere raindrops on the surface of an ocean.

Such opportunities do not begin to penetrate the outer fringe of the repertoire nor to use the potential, limited though it is, that exists in this area.

What appalling frustration must be felt by these artists, for no performer more delights in his art than the singer, no form of musical expression being more personal.

It is difficult to pinpoint just when interest in vocal solo concerts began to fall off in this city.

* * *

When I was growing up as a music student all the then renowed singers paid regular visits to Victoria — Marian Anderson, John Charles Thomas, Melchoir, Schumann-Heink, Pinza, Lili Pons, Igor Gorin, Dorothy Maynor, Rise Stevens among others.

Enthusiastic audiences flowed into the Royal Theatre for these concerts, usually out-distancing the numbers for any other kind.

Maybe interest waned when the artists' concert tours dwindled during World War II. Subsequently fewer artists undertook the rigorous road schedules and public interest, at least in the Vancouver-Victoria area, was never rekindled.

The disinterest in solo singing has been evident at the Victoria Music Festival in the last few years, where adult vocal classes draw little attention in comparison to others and in sharp contrast to earlier festivals when the halls were packed for open, operatic and Rose Bowl competitions.

To sum up the situation, consider the recent visit to Victoria of Australian contralto Lauris Elms, an exceptional artist possessed of a voice of immaculate beauty.

* * *

Besides her appearance with the symphony orchestra she was presented in a solo recital of gorgeous songs and arias but the McPherson's 400-odd seat lower floor was sparsely filled for the rare event.

Can anything be done to alter this sad state of affairs?

Trends have to start somewhere and with a few people who love song — and there are a few around — plus the singers themselves, it should be possible to form an action group.

Much as I hesitate to suggest another society be added to the present superabundance, how about a Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Solo Singing?

SPESS could mount concerts featuring one or two singers at a time in programs from the solo repertoire, carefully tailored as to length and content with intention to push tentacles out into the non-committed area of concert-goers.

The principal motive would be to open up the repertoire and build audiences while providing the singers with a platform.

In conclusion let me offer a bravo for an old institution that has done its best to make room for the singer and the song — the Musical Art Society — and for something new that started last winter and will be heard from again hopefully, later this winter, Opera in Action.

Catherine Young is the genius behind this move which provided a worthwhile experience for singers and audience with a concert version of Mozart's Magic Flute.

It was great hearing those fine voices — Adele Lewis, Ruth Champion, Peggy Packard, Pierann Moon, Karen Smith, Art Wiebe, Hans Steffen — encore please, Cathy Young.

A Great Novel on the Moral Dimension of War

By GEORGE WOODCOCK

"Russia is doomed to be governed by fools; she knows no other way," says one of the minor characters of Alexander Solzhenitsyn's most recent novel, August 1914. And when a surly young radical subaltern asks the hero — a conscientious staff officer named Vorotyntsev — what differences are left between men if one discounts the differences of political parties, Vorotyntsev replies: "The difference between decency and swinishness, Ensign." And then he strikes an Orwellian note that re-echoes at strange places throughout the book.

AUGUST 1914, by Alexander Solzhenitsyn. Copp Clark. $10.50.

ONE WORD OF TRUTH. Copp Clark. $1.00.

August 1914 is the kind of book that really needs a panel of reviewers.

There should be an expert on military history who can tell us how far Solzhenitsyn is objectively accurate when he sets out to reconstruct in the shape of a novel those fatal first weeks of Russia's participation in the First World War, when her generals led their great peasant armies into the trap of East Prussia where the Germans inflicted on them at Tannenberg a defeat from which their country has still not recovered, a defeat whose ultimate consequences were the Russian revolution of 1917 and Lenin's rise to power.

There should also be a linguist, since doubts have been cast by some experts on the complete accuracy of Michael Glenny's translation.

But there must also be a reviewer who considers the book as a novel rather than an exercise in strategy or translation, and who, remembering how Constance Garnett's dreadful translations of Dostoevsky and Aylmer Maude's only slightly less dreadful translations of Tolstoy opened whole new worlds to the imagination, is willing to throw his mind and feelings open to what is offered and to consider the book as a human document, which, ultimately, is all that novels are.

I am that reviewer, almost ignorant of Russian and temperamentally alienated from military affairs of any kind, and yet fascinated by the depths and echoes of one of the most remarkable novels to come out of Russia since Tolstoy made his perverse decision to write no more as an artist.

The comparison with Tolstoy is inevitable, but it can be misleading. At first sight August 1914 looks as though it will shape into the kind of vast and complexly orchestrated novel about a society in dramatic transition which Tolstoy produced in War and Peace. But Solzhenitsyn has not the same sense of novelistic architecture as Tolstoy.

He makes a half-hearted attempt at the beginning and end of August 1914, and for a chapter or so in the middle of the book, to portray life behind the fighting lines of Russia in those fatal months before the war, and some justification is given for this procedure by the fact that the characters in civilian life are usually in some way connected with those at the front.

But though these civilian chapters do give a slight flavor of the selfish character of Russian life in those years just before the revolution when the old aristocrats were being replaced by a vulgar class of nouveau riche landowners and industrialists, they lack interest, depth and color in comparison with the major sections of the book which deal with the war itself.

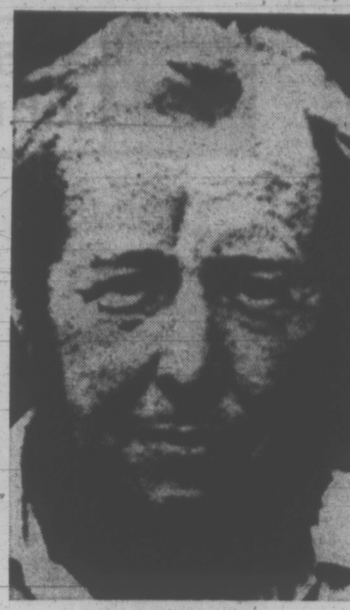
August 1914 is not a war novel in the same sensational way as Remarque's All Quiet on the Western Front or Norman Mailer's The Naked and the Dead. The conventional horrors of war, the descriptions of mangled bodies, of deep inner agonies of disgust and fear, of minds hardening into brutality, are barely utilized; the author wisely assumes that his readers have had enough of all this, and that a mere hint or two is sufficient to indicate their presence.

What he is really concerned with is the moral dimension of war, not merely in terms of the individuals directly concerned, but also in terms of nations and of whole classes, from the depressed nobility who officer the army down to the dogged peasants who form the much abused rank and file.

Essentially, though the cast of characters is almost as numerous as that of War and Peace, the moral action of the novel, the most important action in the author's mind, centres around two men. One of them is an elderly Cossack general, Samsonov, not too bright but utterly loyal and brave and wise in his assessment of what should be done tactically to ensure a victory over the Germans in East Prussia.

But Samsonov is betrayed by the strategic follies of the unbelievable incompetents in the high command, and at last, fleeing through the forest when his army is surrounded and his career is foundering in defeat and disgrace, he kills himself.

Meanwhile, in the role of accusing angel, appears Vorotynstev, a staff colonel sent by the commander-in-chief to gain a first-hand impression of the actual situation at the front. Appalled by the stupidity of the generals who are bungling operations with decisions made far from the scene of fighting, he tries to stave off the disaster by organizing forlorn defensive tactics, and finally, with a few companions, breaks through the encircling German forces to denounce the incompetent generals in the council-of-war presided over by the Grand Duke Nicholas. His quixoticism is fruitless; nobody wants to hear the truth.



SOLZHENITSYN
. . . accuses successors

Books

In that final scene, the strange double focus that has been disturbing one throughout the novel resolves itself. This is not only a book about Russia in 1914; it is obliquely also a book about Russia today, and about what has happened to the country in the half century since the events described. There is a significant passage in which Solzhenitsyn talks about the rank and file of the army.

"The press did its duty by them by lumping them together under the phrase, 'the grey heroes.' But photographs there were none; and more's the pity, because since then our national make-up has changed completely. Our features have altered, and no camera-lens can ever again find those trusting, bearded men, those friendly eyes, those placid, selfless faces."

The implication is clear. Despite the faults of Tsarism, it did not reach deeply enough into the lives of the people to alter their characters, and so there was still a hope of a better world, but events — the war, the civil war, the Stalinist age — prevented all that. Elsewhere, Solzhenitsyn remarks that the war "devoured our strength and our faith in ourselves, uselessly and irretrievably snatching from us our bravest and strongest men and leaving the second-raters," and one feels he is not only talking about the war, but also about the long night that followed, for there is a similar haunting statement in his Nobel Speech, One Word of Truth, when he talks of the writers who died in the prison camps.

"Those who already had a literary reputation when they sank into that abyss are at least known — but how many died totally unknown, never once publicly named! And hardly any of them have returned. A whole national literature has been left there, buried without a coffin, without even any underclothes, naked, just a name-tag tied 'round one toe . . . And how am I today, accompanied as I am by the shadows of the fallen, bowing my head as I stand aside to let those other men who deserved this honor before me take their places on this platform — how am I today to guess and put into words what they would have wanted to say?"

Like War and Peace, August 1914, is largely a didactic work on the nature of war and its effects on human societies, but Solzhenitsyn differs from Tolstoy in refusing to accept the theory that the courses of wars and other great collective events are determined principally by blind mass forces and that no men are responsible. "There might be some consolation — he says — in Tolstoy's conviction that it is not generals who lead armies, not captains who command ships or companies of infantry, not presidents or leaders who run states or political parties, were it not that too often the twentieth century has proved to us that it is such men who do these things."

And Solzhenitsyn does not merely remark on this as a general truth. He accuses certain men explicitly for the disasters of 1914, but when he makes one of his characters say, "Russia is doomed to be governed by fools; she knows no other way . . ." the whole perspective suddenly extends, and, though only one Bolshevik is mentioned in the whole book (and he never appears in the flesh), one is certain that in condemning the Tsar and the Grand-Duke and the generals, Solzhenitsyn is also by implication accusing their successors who created the prison camps, those — to use his phrase — who were unable to tell "the difference between decency and swinishness."

Despite the differences between the two men, it is of Tolstoy more than of any other Russian writer that Solzhenitsyn reminds one — Tolstoy standing alone to defy and expose tyranny, with the autocrats fearing to destroy him because of his worldwide moral power.

It Takes More Than Caring

By PAT BARCLAY

Most of us still care about pollution. That is, I hope, a true statement, despite the gloomy predictions of cynics who would relegate environmental concern to that limbo where wornout fads like rumble seats or chlorophyll tablets — for people, not plants — disappear.

Far from losing interest in the subject, we have moved on, past the need for scare headlines whose positive function was to awaken us to the need for genuine concern. We are awake; we are concerned. The question is, where do we go from here?

Last year a group of elementary school children in Thunder Bay, Ontario, found out. They wrote a letter to the city's mayor asking what they could do about pollution. The next thing they knew they were hauling bulging plastic bags around the schoolyard at eight o'clock in the morning, assisted by the chief elected officer of the city in blue jeans. The thing to remember about pollution, he told them, is that much of it is so obvious we do not even realize it is there.

The work of such organizations as SPEC and Pollution Probe has done much to ensure that public awareness, once aroused, remains informed. Localized crusades sprout and blossom, often with satisfying results. But the real action, as Dr. Thomas L. Burton of the University of Waterloo points out in Natural Resource Policy in Canada, must take place at the federal level.

What Canada needs, badly, is political pressure from an informed public. It was "to provide a forum for discussion, a take-off point for a sustained, objective debate about future policy" that Dr. Burton has written this book.

He begins by outlining the history of the Conservation Movement in North America. (Conservation conference delegates proposed that legislation should be enacted against water pollution in 1909!). Next he describes the "major policy issues" confronting Canadians today: "the relationship between economic growth, on the one hand, and the declining quality of the environment on the other," and Canada's "natural resource relations" with other countries, particularly the U.S.

Then follows a chapter on the inimitable Canadian divisions of federal-provincial responsibility, sounding like a straight-faced version of the old elephant joke (you remember, it went, "Six students from six different countries were asked to write a composition about the elephant . . .") and a particularly intriguing analysis of where each of Canada's three major parties takes its stand on the sticky questions of technology vs. ecology and foreign ownership.

He includes a discussion of "the environmental conscience," pointing out that modern conservationists do not flinch from incorporating aesthetic and spiritual values into their "arsenal of debate." (As John Stuart Mill argued in 1848, "It is not good for man to be kept perforce at all times in the presence of his species . . . Solitude, in the sense of being often alone, is essential to any depth of meditation or of character; and solitude in the presence of natural beauty and grandeur is the cradle of thought and aspirations which are not only good for the individual, but which society could ill do without.")

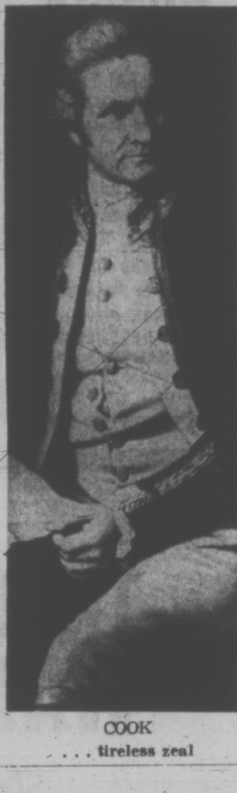
All this has been presented with such studied impartiality that we begin to suffer from curiosity to know Burton's own political sympathies. In his final chapter he breaks it to us gently: "What I am proposing is nothing less than a major shift in social ethics . . . there is really no alternative." We must either alter our "production-consumption-growth ethic," or watch our civilization collapse. Only a long-run commitment to new goals can serve as a final solution, says Burton, but in the short run, there are a few remedial measures we should apply.

Chief of these is "functional socialism," as defined by the Swedish writer Gunnar Adler-Karlsson. Burton hastens to explain that it is "not a revolutionary concept, but merely the recognition and formal definition of an already existing and accepted principle of our society," namely, the division of control between industry and government (i.e., society).

It's an intriguing idea, as interested readers will discover.

The chief weakness of Burton's book, its painstaking, even plodding clarity, is also in an odd way its greatest strength. Canadians looking for a firm basis for the study of our most pressing national problems should find it an invaluable resource.

NATURAL RESOURCE POLICY IN CANADA, by Thomas L. Burton. McClelland and Stewart. $3.50.



COOK
. . . tireless zeal

The Lonely Adventurer Has His Story Retold

By JAMES McCOOK

Alistair McLean is a successful novelist — "HMS Ulysses," "The Guns of Navarone," etc. — but he has resisted the temptation to embroider the story of Captain Cook.

CAPTAIN COOK, by Alistair MacLean, Collins, $8.95.

MacLean, who was a wartime sailor, says Nelson and Cook are the most revered figures in the annals of the Royal Navy but Nelson was a friendly extrovert while Cook kept his thoughts to himself. No Lady Hamilton enlivened the story of the great navigator. He had a wife who outlived him by 56 years and six children, three of whom died in infancy, but MacLean finds that he mentioned his wife only twice in his journals and correspondence.

So there is little to go on in attempting to judge Cook as a husband and father but by inference he would have been as just in his family life as on his ships. Not only just but kind, by the standards of his time, which were rough.

Disappointing as a romantic figure, Cook never failed in practical achievement. He left voluminous logs and journals filled with accurate observations from the Antarctic to Arctic.

His achievements in exploration brought him fame and MacLean emphasizes the battles Cook had to fight alone. He was the son of a farm laborer and it seemed advancement for him to be, briefly, a haberdasher's assistant. But, like many another boy, he ached for adventure and the sea.

He sailed on a dirty coal ship which was battered up and down the English coast. How few boys enduring the fatigues and excitement of life at sea have devoted themselves to books and study as Cook did! Navigation, astronomy and mathematics were his pleasure and when he was 27 he was offered command of a merchant ship. Instead of taking it, he did an extraordinary thing — he joined the Royal Navy as an ordinary seaman.

It was the time of the press gangs when men were snatched off the streets to sail naval ships. Within a month of joining, Cook was a master's mate, evidence that his abilities were recognized.

In 1759 he was engaged in charting the St. Lawrence River where the French defenders of Canada had removed every marker and Cook and his colleagues replaced buoys within range of enemy guns. When they had surveyed the river, the British armada which made possible the capture of Quebec sailed in and Wolfe did Cook, who did not even rate as an officer, the compliment of consulting him on the placement of ships.

When Cook left Canada's east coast for the last time in 1767 he was still a non-commissioned officer. The Admiralty may have known that in him they had the greatest seaman, navigator and cartographer of the generation but not until they decided to have a vessel circumnavigate the globe did they conclude it would be best to make Cook a lieutenant, as he was the only man for the command.

MacLean describes Cook's journeys into the unknown seas, the natives who met him with boundless hospitality or showers of stones, the new animals and plants the scientists with him discovered, the willing discipline he could maintain after months at sea without touching port and the tireless zeal with which he performed every task.

In the end there was a dispute with primitive people on a warm shore in 1779 and he was killed. From Nootka to New South Wales and on the scores of islands between his ships were known.

Between 1768 and 1779 he circumnavigated the globe three times in voyages of discovery, and the Northwest Passage and the Great Barrier Reef alike challenged him.

Captain Cook's story has often been told and it is none the worse for the retelling by an admiring McLean.

Not Funny Any More

This posthumous collection of verses by Ogden Nash is more serious in intent than much of his other work. Consequently the book suffers, for Nash's unique style seems to lend itself to witty observation more naturally than to social comment.

THE OLD DOG BARKS BACKWARDS, by Ogden Nash. McClelland and Stewart. $7.25.

Staunch Nash fans may object, but to me there seems to be no comparison between the writers of such well-known early felicities as The Turtle, The Panther, and the One-L Lama, and the sadder but wiser man who penned such lines as "He drinks because she scolds, he thinks; — She thinks she scolds because he drinks, — And neither will admit what's true — That he's a sot and she's a shrew."

What this new book proves, I suppose, is that disillusioned writers find it harder to be funny. Still, there are enough genuine flashes of the old Nash wit to make culling through the poems worth while. There is the one about the young Mozart, whose birthday "Found him six years old and never been Spocked," and the one about the hapless host who sighs, "Would that I could anticipate — How my guests will elect to dissipate."

The drawings by Robert Binks are amusing and do their best to brighten up the proceedings. But significantly, Nash's best line is probably the one he borrowed from a letter to Ann Landers: it refers to the teenager who "doubted the affection of her boyfriend because the only compliment he ever paid her was You sweat less than any fat girl I know." Truth like this ought to be enough to discourage any fiction writer. Especially one whose stock in trade is deadpan humor. — P.B.

BRYAN'S BEAT

Another Byrd Flies High

By BRYAN HAY
Times Staff

Another Byrd is soaring high as a musical solo performer; although, with the amount of help he gets from friends new and old and his first flight, much of the credit must go to his co-performers.

But not all.

Because, like all members of that constantly-changing assemblage, he has well and truly paid his musical dues over the past 15 years.

The dude in question is Skip Battin, who started out as one-half of the Flip and Skip duo in the late Fifties . . . their biggies (in case you're interested) were Cherry Pie and It Was I, both of which were the sort of abomination which could only have found niches in music's wax museum at that particular era.

He then faded into that industry obscurity which shrouds session players and back-up boys until snuggling into the Byrds' nest three years ago as bass player, where he has remained until this present fledgling flight, Skip Battin (Signpost SP-8408). Unfortunately, Skip tends to sound — as well as look — like another performer with a more-or-less identical background, Leon Russell.

And the casual listener, or even someone grabbing for an album in the store, could be forgiven for confusing the two.

Skip, however, manages to pull off the session with such verve and flair that he can stand in his own right.

Some of the other people I mentioned earlier who deserve more credit on the album than a passing reference in tiny type on the back of the sleeve are: co-Byrds Clarence White on guitar and Roger McGuinn on 12-string; Billy Mundi on drums and Spanky McFarlane (she of Our Gang) chirping along on back-up vocals.

A special note should be made of the co-author of the tracks on the album — Kim Fowley — an almost-mythical personage from the pop world who has been hanging in there for almost as long as Battin himself.

* * *

Although in the style of the seventies, the cuts make up almosst a one-man rock and roll revival . . . but are jouncy and flip enough to score with the vast majority of people to whom the Golden Age of rock is ancient history and not a happy, hazy memory.

To pun very badly, the album just skips along in a vein half-way between nostalgia and tomorrow.

Subject matter of the tracks ambles all the way from Dick Clark to Rudolph Valentino to Captain Video to your friendly neighborhood narc.

Sometimes, a group makes it because they ride right in on the crest of a fad; sometimes, they are strong enough to create a fad; sometimes, they are unique enough to stand on their own in that wide-ranging sphere known as pop.

Sometimes, however, the reverse is true.

A group fails to make it because people just aren't ready for them.

Such a group that failed to click was Fairport Convention, a British folk ensemble in the Pentagle vein, who released two very-tight and excellent-produced albums in the late 60s.

At that time, though, the world was very much into its own head and a psychedelic shimmering of sight and sound prevailed — and very few people wanted to move into another realm than that provided by their own mind.

But times have changed.

And Fairport Convention has reconvened.

Under the name of Steeleye Span, they have released an album which could mean the big breakthrough for them Below The Salt (Chrysalis CHR 1008).

And this time, they're not messing on the periphery of pure folk . . . they've jumped into the bag feet first with a collection of traditional tracks ripped right out of the pages of Child's Ballads and performed in the loose, rough fashion that befits this kind of music.

All in all, one mother of an album.

The ideal thing for those long nights of winter when the wind howls, rain lashes the windows, the fire flickers low and the dry red wine is nearly gone.

Although the performance may be rough, there's nothing haphazard about the production. Stereo quality is excellent and the musical craftsmanship controlled to the nth degree.

* * *

This is folk as it should be and all too often only is in the casual singing of friends.

Among standouts on the album are a seven-minute-plus version of King Henry and a rendition of John Barleycorn that makes the one released by Traffic a few years ago look like something hashed together by a high-school glee club.

There's very little to say about this album without merely reeling off a string of superlatives, most of which would be redundant, except to point out one thing: Give your head and heritage a treat and blow some bread on it.

It could open up a whole new world for you.

B.C. Forests Inspire a Song

By RON ROBINSON
CJVI Program Director

That talented songwriter from Humpback Road, Constable Dave Richardson of the Saanich Police Department, has just received some good news from Capitol Records in Los Angeles. It looks pretty certain that his song "Wildflower," released on an LP this summer, will be issued as the group's next single.

Richardson wrote the words 18 months ago, and when his good friend Dave Foster was putting together the group he met a talented guitarist Doug Edwards, who had played with the Fifth Dimension. Edwards set the words to music and the result was "Wildflower."

Now the song is being played from the LP, by CKLW, the Windsor Ont., rock station that dominates the Detroit area. There has been enough U.S. listener response to apparently warrant Capitol's decision to issue a single. Richardson has had five songs recorded; the most successful being "Reaching Far Too High" by Judy Ginn and her brother Jim, which was also sung by Shani Wallis on a Tom Jones TV show.

The group (Skylark) has since moved to Los Angeles, where they have a Capitol recording contract for eight albums in four years. Dave Richardson has three songs he thinks will be given careful consideration for their next album. One is "Greentrees," inspired by B.C.'s forests. Dave says he really appreciates this province after 18 months on the Prairies, where "scenery is like a pool table!"

* * *

Music has always been a primary method for man to transmit socially pertinent information. And if you'll check closely, contemporary popular songs convey a far greater understanding of our evolving culture than we might give them credit for.

For example, have you noticed an upswing in songs about marital problems? They've been coming, more and more frequently, in the past several years, and the empathy for songs about broken homes was most recently exemplified in the popularity of Wayne Newton's "Daddy, Don't You Walk So Fast!" Also noticeable is a decrease in interest in songs concerning drugs, ecology, the Jesus movement, and so on.

Name Concealed

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Vatican art expert says he has discovered that Michaelangelo chiselled his initial in the palm of the Madonna on the Pieta. Dr. Vittorio Federici, director of scientific research for the Vatican museums, said he found the previously undetected "M" during work to repair the damage done by the vandal that attacked the statue in St. Peter's Basilica last May. He also chiselled his name on the belt the Madonna wears.

Amity Singers at Church

Benjamin Britten's delightful Ceremony of Carols — a choral work that portrays the Nativity in a reverent folk idiom — and Marc-Antoine Charpentier's Messe de Minpite pour Noel, will be sung Friday by the Amity Singers under George Corwin.

The program will take place at the Church of Our Lord at 8 p.m.

Soloists who will participate are Frances Carter, Charles Dorrington, Garth Gislason, Madeleine Groos, Susan Word, Karen Smith, Diana Hall and Robert Hall.

Assisting will be an instrumental group consisting of Kathryn Ely, harp, James Furmston, organ, Jane Pearce and Glen Fast, flutes.

Festival Winners To Be Honored

An event honoring all past Rose Bowl and Victoria City Medallion winners of Greater Victoria Music Festivals, from the initial year, 1927, to 1972, will take place in March at Victoria City Hall.

In this connection the Music Festival Society would like to hear from winners or from anyone having knowledge of their present whereabouts.

Contact should be made with Mrs. Lauretta Holdridge, 509 Oliver Street, or phone 598-5608, before Dec. 15.

16-pce. orchestra 10 p.m.-3 a.m. $15 Couple includes hot chicken etc. Limit 200 couples. Dress optional. Tickets 598-3638, 385-5384.

VIRTUOSO artist and new concert master of Victoria Symphony, Derek Collier will be featured for the first time as soloist with the orchestra in the Sunday-Monday symphony concerts at the Royal Theatre. With Laszlo Gati conducting, Collier will perform the brilliant and lovely Tchaikowsky violin concerto. Also on the star-filled program will be the duo piano team of Robin Wood and Winifred Scott with Allan Purdy narrating Saint-Saens' Carnival of the Animals, and solo trumpet, Boyde Hood. This is the final concert pair of 1972.

Choir Marks Milestone

Holding the record as the longest-lived male choir in Canada is Victoria's Arion Male Chorus, which this season celebrates its 80th anniversary.

On Sunday, at 7:30 p.m., the chorus will present a program of sacred music at Metropolitan United Church under the direction of its conductor, Bert Storar.

Established in 1892 and named after a legendary Greek poet of 625 B.C., the Arion Male Choir had as its first president, Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, British Columbia's historic judge and music buff.

Among its conductors have been some well known names in the annals of the city — Howard Russell, Herbert Kent, Frank Sehl, and Frank Tupman.

In July of 1973 the 50 members will take part in the international Eisteddfod competition in Wales after a preliminary round of warm-up concerts in Glasgow, Edinbourough and Newcastle.

Among music to be performed Sunday will be the Hallelujah Amen from Handel's Judas Maccabaeus, Waring's arrangement of The Battle Hymn of the Republic, and arias from Mendelssohn's St. Paul and Handel's Samson.

Duettists will be John McVie and Don Twine. The solo, Total eclipse, will be sung by James Oakman.

Glee Club Concert

A concert of Christmas music is to be performed by the Newcombe Glee Club, Sunday, Dec. 10 in Metropolitan United Church.

The event is under sponsorship of the Victoria Presbyterial United Church Women and proceeds of an offering will go to their Outreach work.

The singers will be assisted by a UVic instrumental quintet consisting of Jane Pearce, flute; Susan Pumphrey, Oboe, Joan Watson, horn, Paul Naismith, bassoon and Donna Zapf, clarinet.

Concert starting time is 2:30 p.m.

The Newcombe Glee Club began as the Civil Service Singers in 1967, principally to perform in the legislative buildings during the Christmas season.

Two years later the new name was adopted and under the direction of Dennis Sheppard the choir has developed a varied repertoire and is in demand for concerts throughout the year.

Russia Featured In Travel Film

A special event presented by World Adventure Tours, Wednesday at McPherson Playhouse, will be a color film on Russia. It will be presented in person by Dick Reddy, who has travelled to the Soviet Union six times in an effort to photograph the unusual and keep abreast of the ever-changing scene.

This film, which will be shown once only, at 8:30 p.m., is not part of the regular series.

Highlights of the film include the city of Leningrad, with its Winter Palace and unique Russian gardens, village scenes, Moscow and the Kremlin walls and Lenin's tomb; monument to the astronauts, a tour of Moscow Exhibition, a Black Sea boat trip and a performance of the Russian Circus.

Film's Top Names To Honor 'Founder'

HOLLYWOOD (Reuter) — The Hollywood film industry has announced plans for celebrating the 100th birthday of its "patriarch"—Adolph Zukor, founder of Paramount Pictures.

A lineup of the top names in the film industry is to take part in a stage show Jan. 7, when Zukor, a Hungarian who arrived in New York in 1888 with $25 sewn in his jacket lining, will be given a cake with 100 candles.

The names include Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, and Mae West.

Proceeds from the show, expected to be about $500,000, go to the charities of Variety Clubs International. Each of the hundred candles is to be sold for $1,000.

Zukor, a former fur dealer, entered the entertainment industry early in the century by buying up penny arcades.

He founded the Famous Players film company in 1912. In 1917, it merged with other companies to become Paramount Pictures Corp.

Moore Re-Elected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Moore has been re-elected president of the western regional council of the International Woodworkers of America, a spokesman said.

He defeated Don Poirier, a last-minute candidate from the loggers local, by a substantial margin.

Regional vice-presidents Jack Munro and Wyman Trineer were re-elected and Fred Fiver was re-elected secretary-treasurer, defeating Weldon Jubenville, president of the Duncan local.

WILLIAMS HALTS LOGGING ROAD

Resources Minister Bob Williams has ordered a halt to work on a logging road in the Fry Creek area of the West Kootenay until a comprehensive environmental impact study is complete.

He said that the study, which he hopes will be complete in two months, represents the beginning of an entirely new direction in his two portfolios.

He is also responsible for the Department of Recreation and Conservation.

Williams' announcement follows complaints in the Fry Creek area that construction of the logging road along the creek — about 50 miles north of Nelson — would damage the environment.

'We will be from here on in considering wildlife input, recreation input and forestry input together when we determined management terms in prime valleys throughout the province,'' Williams said.

''This kind of combined effort by representatives of both the forests department and the recreation and conservation department will become a matter of course in the coming years.''

Three Facing Weapons Charge

NANAIMO (CP) — Three Victoria-area residents have been charged with possession of weapons dangerous to the public peace — a .38-calibre pistol, three .22-calibre Derringers and two sets of brass knuckles.

Susan Harry, 17, of Sooke, and two Langford youths, James Roger McCallum, 18, and Richard Joseph Michael Barnes, 17, were remanded for trial.

COLORFUL FIN MAKES A DEBUT

OTTAWA (CP) — A $5 bill in the new more colorful series of Canadian banknotes will be put into circulation Monday.

It bears a portrait engraving of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Liberal prime minister from 1896 to 1911.

On the back of the bill is a picture of a British Columbia salmon seiner.

A Year's Research Runs Off

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — More than two years' research into muscular dystrophy was destroyed when someone released from their pens a group of mink affected with the disease, Washington State University scientists report.

Dr. Gerald A. Hegreberg, pathologist, and Dr. John Gorham, both of the United States agriculture department's agricultural research service at WSU, said they lost 75 mink.

Some also were affected by a rare virus similar to diseases in man that lead to progressive mental and muscular deterioration.

The mink, the only ones in the world known to be affected by a particular strain of muscular dystrophy, were being studied to find a cure for the diseases.

Regardless of whether the mink are recovered, the research project is ruined, Dr. Hegreberg said.

They were conducting genetic studies with the animals kept in separated groups. As it was not possible to mark the mink individually, the breeding herd is ruined for future experiments.

BRUCE W. ROGER

For natural pictures of very young children, give them a gift, then photograph, from their level, the action and expression that results. Ask your child to arrange her toys for a picture of them, then include her in the picture — she will be less concerned because you're photographing her toys and not her.

Most important, bring your camera and flash in to Jus-Rite for our free 5-point camera check to be sure of capturing these unforgettable expressions.

Think Big.

We finally did it.

We finally changed the looks of the Bug.

For openers, open the door.

And Wham-O:

"What's a nice big interior like you doing inside a Volkswagen?"

There's plenty of leg room up front.

There's lots of head room.

The windshield is curved and pushed away from your nose. It's 42% larger. (That's the windshield, not your nose.)

The padded dash is completely redesigned and easier to read (for those of you who like to read dashes).

The seats are more comfortable, curved and contoured to your body.

Inertia-type seat belts buckle up as standard equipment.

And wonder of wonders, it is now much easier for passengers to get to the back of the Bug.

With all the newfound room, we had to find a new ventilation system.

Which we did.

And it's so good that, now, even the side windows can be ventilated and defogged.

As for outside improvements, they're mostly hidden. (Although the taillights are nearly twice as large as ever before.)

Altogether we made 20 improvements in the Super Beetle for 1973.

But without a doubt, the biggest improvement of all is the feeling you get inside.

Take it for a test sit today.

Few things in life work as well as a Volkswagen.

A Beloved Red Makes His Last Hurrah

TORONTO (CP) — For Joseph Baruch Salsberg, communism was a god that failed.

For Joe Salsberg's friends —crusty capitalists, social democrats and many in the middle ground—the fiery ex-Communist did not fail along with the party.

To prove the point his friends snapped up tickets to a dinner fete in honor of his 70th birthday, within days of its announcement.

Patrons of the dinner included politicians and public figures of every political stripe and persuasion—except his old Communist comrades.

Former Ontario premier Leslie Frost, commentator Gordon Sinclair, national NDP Leader David Lewis and Pierre Berton, writer and broadcaster, were among the patron's.

Until 1957, Mr. Salsberg was probably Canada's most popular Communist. He rose through the ranks from labor organizer to Toronto city alderman and sat from 1945 to 1955 as a member of the Ontario legislature.

His showdown with the party came with the growing Communist anti-Semitism.

After the 1955 Ontario election when Conservative Allan Grossman ended Mr. Salsberg's 12-year reign in Toronto's St. Andrew's riding, he made the pilgrimage to Moscow to view the "new society" first hand

He explained, in an interview, that his doubts about Soviet democracy began with the 1937 purge trials.

In Moscow, "things were worse than I ever expected."

In 1956 he spoke to the central committee of the Communist Party of Canada for the last time:

"If the only way to socialism is over the mountains of dead, including my own comrades, then I do not want that kind of socialism."

In May of 1957 he and a number of other prominent Communists abandoned the party.

Since 1957 he has promoted humanitarian and cultural causes, for Soviet Jews, for family welfare and for the Yiddish tongue.

He has worked for the financing of a clinic in Israel and for the fraternal order he founded.

David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, remembers grappling with Mr. Salsberg on the hustings.

"Salsberg was the only Communist I knew with a sense of humor. . . . He was never a bullyboy, but he got results. He gave us a lot of trouble."

Lotus position relaxes businessman Lorrie Kirk

Victorians Turn On to Yoga

In the past three years so many Victorians have turned on to yoga that Camosun College has to turn away students and the YM-YWCA has increased clases from three in 1969 to 23 this year.

More and more housewives are giving up strenuous exercise sessions in front of the television set in favor of yoga classes they claim leave them releaxed, refreshed and physically fit.

Businessmen find that a noon-hour session of yoga at the 'Y' relieves stress and tension better than a lunch-time martini or swim in the pool.

Yoga was originally one of the six systems of East Indian philosophy. The classical form became known in the middle ages as Raja Yoga or Royal Yoga. Over the years other forms developed, among them Hatha Yoga — the yoga of force — which became famous throughout the world.

Followers of Hatha Yoga believe that by means of exercises and development of the will the body's automatic processes can be controlled by the mind.

Superhuman

In the past some yoga adepts have learned to control their heartbeats and survive for an appreciable length of time without breathing. There is ample evidence that some yogis have an almost superhuman control over their bodies.

Most Westerners, however, perform the exercises for the sake of suppleness, good muscle tone and relaxation.

Realtor Lorrie Kirk takes a noon hour yoga class for businessmen Mondays at the 'Y'. Kirk says that after the hour-long exercise session he is "so relaxed" he finds it difficult to stay awake during the five-minute relaxation period. Kirk says yoga is especially good for people who are highstrung or tense because it teaches relaxation.

He claims yoga develops strength in every part of the body: "A person becomes noticeably stronger in only a few weeks."

Days when he is too busy to go to the 'Y', Kirk performs his exercises in his office.

"The exercises become a habit," Kirk said. "I practise my deep breathing while driving the car."

As well as classes for businessmen and housewives the 'Y' has yoga courses for couples and teenagers. Volunteer instructor Jessica Tucker describes yoga as "a whole way of life that improves people spiritually, mentally and physically.

"People are so tense and irritable today," Tucker said. "Yoga makes them slow down."

Yoga also teaches self discipline — a virtue most westerners lack, she added.

More Interest

Bob Dewhurst, co-ordinator of special projects for the community services division of Camosun Cllege, says more instructors will have to be hired if the interest in yoga keeps increasing at the present rate.

The division offers courses in yoga levels one and two, Hatha Yoga, meditation and yogic exercises.

Instructor Ingrid McColl teaches two hour-long sessions of yogic exercises Thursday evening at Willows Elementary School. Lessons cost $8.00 for 10 hours' instruction.

The other yoga courses offered by the division are taught by Gordon Limbrick who introduced the first classes in Victoria in 1964. Limbrick teaches two-hour long sessions every weeknight at S. J. Willis Elementary School. Lessons cost $15 for 20 hours' instruction.

Yoga classes are also available Thursday mornings at the Oak Bay Community Centre. Corner Stone, a Local Initiative Project operating out of St. David's Church-by-the-Sea, offers women free lessons every Wednesday afternoon.

Bone Growth Discovery May Aid Cancer Cure

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two UCLA researchers say they have discovered the substances and workings that control bone growth, which could lead to doctors eventually being able to direct the growth of good bones to replace cancerous ones.

Dr. Marshal R. Urist, associate professor of surgery at the university's school of medicine and Hisashi Iwata, of the UCLA bone research laboratory, report their findings in the Journal of Theoretical Biology.

The keys to bone growth, they said, are bone morphogenetic protein, BMP, and an enzyme, Bmpase which work together in a delicate balance. BMP spurs growth, and Bmpase shuts off the process when the bone has been properly formed, they said.

Mending

It is this "on-off switch" that controls the mending of broken and cracked bones, they reported, and enables bones to heal perfectly after accidents.

Some bone diseases, the researchers said, are apparently caused by imbalances between the two substances. A disease called Myositis Ossificans, in which the victim's muscles gradually turn to bone, may be caused by a shortage of Bmpase to switch off the bone-building cells, they said.

Softening

Osteoporosis, a softening of the bones, may be the result of a shortage of BMP, they said.

The UCLA laboratory is now trying to synthesize BMP, which could then be used to treat individuals who need to regenerate large amounts of bone.

Bone cancer victims currently have large amounts of bone removed, far more than the body can replace. Surgeons now sometimes fill the vacancy with bone from a bone bank.

A far better solution, Urist said, would be to apply BMP and Bmpase to the region, stimulating and controlling the growth of new, living bone.

In laboratory animals, he said, it has been possible to replace an entire thigh bone by putting in its place a rod holding substances that contain BMP, which apparently stimulates the surrounding tissue to turn into bone.

Handloom to hold its first exhibition of pottery . . .

Next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday . . . Dec. 6-7-8 . . . will be exciting days at the Handloom because these are the days upon which its very first exhibition will be held . . . And fittingly enough, the exhibition is to be of pottery by Jeanne Sheppard of Victoria . . . a delightful young potter whom the Handloom consider tops in her field . . . We know Mrs. Sheppard personally, and have seen a great deal of her work in her own studio . . . we even own one of her pots . . . so we can tell you with a great deal of enthusiasm that a real treat is in store for you next week . . . The artist herself will be on hand from noon till around 5 p.m. on each of the three days . . . to answer questions . . . tell you about glazes . . . and the important part they play in the safety of pots used for cooking . . . And speaking of glazes, Mrs. Sheppard makes all her own . . . Lovely earthy colors which she copies from the colors of stones and growing things . . . We hear there's to be a surprise in this exhibition . . . two exciting new glazes never seen before . . . So be sure to visit the Handloom next week . . . You'll find both large and small pieces . . . excellent for Christmas gifts . . . There's also a good representation of pottery by Robin Righton, Lynda Mackie and Carol Southward . . . All waiting for you at . . . Handloom, 625 Trounce Alley, 384-1011 and Empress Hotel, 384-1518.

Bill Blass and Pierre Cardin are among top designers who have created patterns for sewing men's wear at home.

You'll be wearing these lovelies when the sun sets . . .

We're getting slightly tired of the adjective "beautiful" . . . but honestly, how else can you describe clothes . . . or anything else for that matter . . . that literally make you catch your breath in admiration? . . . We're thinking particularly now of some stunning long dresses and skirts we saw in Eaton's Import Room on Friday . . . All of them deceptively simple . . . but with that special panache that only the finest of imported clothes seem to possess . . . Like the two pure wool jersey gowns by Paganne . . . Tangerine background with a water lily print down the front and swirling to the side slit in the skirt . . . One is a halter style . . . the other rides high under the bosom, with long sleeves and low V fore and aft . . . Or the Italian dresses . . . one a white wool knit with crisscross front and narrow shoulder straps . . . topped with a bolero length cardigan . . . Another a simple black knit with low scoop neck and short sleeves, ribbed bodice and mesh weave in skirt and sleeves . . . There are some smashing separate long skirts from London . . . Wool jersey with big butterfly-like designs on dark backgrounds . . . A gorgeous handwoven skirt in a lovely shade of turquoise looks exquisite worn with a long-sleeved, turtleneck silver lurex top . . . We saw several of these toppers from France . . . Fantastically flattering, as are the little silver, gold or multi-colored lurex shrinks . . . One of these will make any plain outfit look gala! . . . Eaton's Import Room, 382-7141, loc. 242.

Judiciously-chosen pants can work in any woman's wardrobe and it looks as if they're here to stay.

Sandals to complete your cruisewear wardrobe . . .

You may be thinking Christmas . . . but those of you who are planning cruises or trips to the sunny south also have things like clothes and shoes on your mind . . . and here's where Munday's come in . . . They've just received an outstanding selection of Amalfi sandals for warm weather wear . . . and we guarantee you'll have no trouble finding exactly the shoes you need for your trip! . . . New sandal patterns this year are "Tutti" . . . a pretty suede with a higher heel than usual . . . in either violet or a camel color called sabia . . . "Bricco" promises to be a big success . . . It fits like a dream . . . with its mid-heel and artfully constructed straps . . . White, red, or beige calf, and black patent . . . A truly beautiful shoe! . . . "Costume" is a sporty sandal with the new heavier sole and low, dark heel. Comes in white or dark brown . . . "Bintocco" has a crepe sole with rope trim, flat heel and plaited leather vamp . . . White or beige . . . Prices range from $24 to $28 for these new models . . . There are also several new evening shoes for now, and later . . . A gold or silver sandal filled in with fine mesh for extra good support . . . Another shoe with higher heel, mesh vamp and brilliant Gucci trim . . . and a pretty black suede T-strap shoe with three brilliant circles forming the upright strap of the T . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

A delightful spot for Christmas shopping . . .

Not very nice of us we'll admit . . . but we couldn't forbear a chuckle when we heard about a friend who did all her Christmas shopping in Europe this past summer . . . lugging stuff all over the place . . . then came back to find she could have bought most everything right here at Sydney Reynold's . . . and probably cheaper in the long run, taking everything into consideration! . . . We had a look through Reynolds ourself the other day, with the usual Yuletide giving in mind . . . and there's just about everything you can think of in the line of traditional European things for hearth and home . . . We saw fencing swords from Toledo . . . as well as reproductions of old Spanish swords forged from the famous Toledo steel . . . Wonderful wall ornaments for the right type of room! . . . From Italy there are Venetian trays . . . pictures . . . wine and liqueur glass and decanter sets in colored crystal gleaming like jewels . . . heavily encrusted with raised gold and enamel flowers . . . Belleek china and Irish coffee glasses are just some of the things you'll find in the Irish Room . . . Along with sets of tumblers adorned with coats of arms of the different counties in Ireland . . . Handsome pewterware from England . . . and dinnerware in lovely old patterns to grace your Christmas table . . . Christmas plates . . . Fragrant pomanders . . . Delicate china floral pieces . . . cups and saucers galore . . . Teapots . . . Cream and sugar sets . . . in a word, just about anything you could ask for to say your "Merry Christmas" with! . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government St., 383-3931.

Bohan's evening dresses always have a bright hip-length jacket or full-length coat.

Gifts in a contemporary mood . . .

Having just told you where to go for traditional gifts . . . we'll turn now to a store that specializes in items of a more contemporary nature . . . the Lighthouse . . . Not only do they sell perfectly marvellous contemporary lamps . . . and you might just consider one of these as a special gift . . . but they have all sorts of other exciting things . . . mostly Scandinavian . . . For the man who likes to play host . . . you couldn't find anything more perfect than one of the neck glasses, a new shipment of which has just arrived . . . All nicely boxed ready to wrap up . . . We saw some really striking jewellery from Sweden and Denmark . . . Rings, earrings, pendants, bracelets, cuff links, etc. in very good contemporary designs . . . Something else we liked were the round Danish tiles . . . designed by one of the leading designers in Europe . . . They tell a story month by month, and can be used as wall decorations or trivets or even plates! . . . The special Christmas wall hangings are adorable! . . . Made of linen and adorned with Santas and reindeers and such . . . they're traditional Yuletide adjuncts to every Scandinavian home . . . All have little bells or something you can ring or work! . . . There are little individual candle holders in the shape of gold stars to decorate the Christmas table . . . Combs in wonderful shapes and colors make great stocking stuffers for teen-agers . . . Some beautiful minis . . . famous pictures and graphic drawings, both framed and unframed . . . More delights than we can possibly tell you about here, so do visit . . . the Lighthouse, 1005 Broad St., 383-6633.

Classic camel and gray are quieting influences in the wider color spectrum.

The camels are coming . . .

Maybe we should be telling you about all the new Christmas gift goodies which have arrived at Wilson's . . . But knowing so many of you are waiting impatiently for duffle coats . . . which have been slow in arriving . . . we'll dwell on practicalities . . . The new duffles are here . . . Cinnamon color at the moment . . . but the camels are coming! . . . Next item of excitement . . . the magnificently tailored double knit wool pantsuits by Hettermarks, of Sweden . . . One style has a blazer jacket, double-breasted with big white pearl buttons . . . The other is a single breasted style . . . a bit longer and wrapped at the waist with a tie belt . . . Colors are black, navy, brown, green, and scarlet . . . Whether you're tall or short, one of these styles is right for you . . . They cost $190 and they look it! . . . Some tailored Hettermarks double-knit coats too . . . Double breasted with half belts in the back . . . Scarlet, gold, green, navy . . . in larger sizes . . . $165 . . . There's also a new shipment of Kislav glovese from France . . . Finest, softest washable kid lined with pure silk so they slip on and off with the greatest of ease . . . Perfectly plain and just right length . . . in black, beige and two shades of brown, at $17 a pair . . . You'll want a pair of these for yourself, we're sure . . . and don't forget that really good gloves make a wonderful Christmas gift! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Cruise to Alaska on a brand new ship . . .

We've heard such glowing accounts of their trips to Alaska by passengers who stop off here en route to or fro . . . that we think this surely must be one of the most delightful of short summer cruises . . . Particularly aboard the Italia . . . which we've visited in port, and consider a paragon of luxury . . . But this coming summer, Princess Cruises, who operate the Italia, are putting on a luxurious new ship . . . the Island Princess . . . which will make a series of 8-day Alaska cruises . . . Starting and ending in Vancouver . . . First one is scheduled for June 17 . . . last one leaving Sept. 5 . . . This new Island Princess is designed in Norway and billed as one of the most beautiful cruise ships in the world . . . Prices, we think, are most reasonable . . . a minimum of $420 U.S. each for an outside stateroom with twin beds and private facilities . . . air conditioning and dial telephone! You can embark in either Vancouver or Victoria . . . cruise the Inside Passage calling at Ketchikan, Juneau, Skagway, Haines, Sitka and Prince Rupert with your ship as your hotel in every port . . . The whole thing sounds terrific . . . and Paulin's are the people to arrange your bookings . . . See them as soon as possible, though, for the best accommodations . . . The CN and CP cruises to Alaska will also be operating as usual, and of course, if you prefer one of these, you should be talking to Paulin's soon! . . . Tongue-Tied Adults Attempt French

In the second of two articles dealing with the study of French in Victoria, we look at the opportunities available to adults to learn Canada's 'second' language.

By CATHERINE CAMPBELL
Times Staff

Wrapping a middle-aged tongue around a newly-acquired French vocabulary can be a frustrating task, but a growing number of enthusiastic Victorians are making the attempt.

"People here have several reasons for learning French," says Sybil Butterfield, instructor of one of Camosun College's evening French classes.

"Some of my students are civil servants who not only have the desire to learn, but feel an obligation to be bilingual.

"Some have French-speaking friends, not only in Quebec but in such far away places as Tahiti and France.

"Others are elementary school teachers who are hoping to get the opportunity to teach French to their students."

There is great interest in Victoria in French for children, Butterfield says, "and the kids definitely learn quicker.

"But adult students are very keen and work hard — and of course discipline is no problem."

Older students are hampered, however, by earlier encounters with "old-fashioned stereotyped grammar-book methods," Butterfield says, "and it's difficult for them to switch to an oral approach."

But self-consciousness over speaking out in class is only a problem among teenagers, she adds.

"Adults don't feel they have much to lose."

Butterfield is currently working to establish a French centre in the city, as a full-time supplement to the already-operating Alliance Francaise. She is hopeful of Camosun support for the plan.

Camosun currently offer seven two-hour French classes which meet once a week.

Instruction focuses on the Voix et Images technique of language tapes and filmstrips.

Classes are divided into four levels of competence, though there is usually not the required minimum of 12 students to compose a top-level group.

Cost for the 20 sessions is $25.

Like the Camosun course, the YM-YWCA French program is advertised as being "conversational."

And according to instructor Christina Lugeon, it keeps its promise.

"I try to get my students to speak right away," she says.

"We start right off with conversation and after 10 hours the ladies can form sentences and hold conversations."

Lugeon is convinced there is something "basically wrong" with the teaching of French in B.C. schools.

"Children with three or four years of French can hardly form a sentence. I'm surprised they don't use a better method.

"The money spent on French education goes into nothing."

Homework Prescribed

The 'Y' course is one hour a week for 10 weeks, priced at $15 for non-members and $7.50 for members.

Lugeon prescribes homework for enthusiastic pupils.

"We use the Living Language series of four records which give phrases and then blank spaces for the student to repeat the words.

"If they really want to go all out, they can tape the whole thing and see if their pronunciation agrees with that on the record."

For those who can afford to become fluent quickly, private tutoring may be the answer.

French coaching, however, is not required as often as might be expected owing to the availability of other less costly methods, says College of Languages director Elfriede Kelch.

"We teach all levels," she adds, "it depends on what's needed. People move at their own speed."

Private lessons are priced at $6 an hour, but are also available on a half-hour basis.

Students occasionally include young children, Kelch says, but many persons are preparing for exams or need a language to qualify for a course of studies.

For others willing to make a serious investment of time (four hours a week) and funds ($125), UVic offers what one of its founders describes as "the only systematic, integrated adult French course in B.C."

The course, now in its second year, grew out of two concerns, says Dr. Laurence, of UVic's department of continuing education.

"The university had offered isolated evening French courses to adults for many years," Devlin says," but we felt a course could be put together to provide a systematic program — an academic path — for adults.

"We were dissatisfied with the existing efforts because they had no goal."

Devlin says the main concern of the course is not to produce scholars, but individuals "who are not necessarily fluent, but are comfortable in both languages and cultures.

"So our first concern is a high level of language ability."

The second goal of the course is an understanding of French culture in Canada.

"From the response it would appear these goals are very attractive," Devlin says.

"For the first course in 1971 we expected 30 applications and got 150.

"We accepted 76, and 71 completed the course. That's a very good rate seeing as its a major commitment of two nights a week.

"The attrition rate," he says "is very low."

This year the course drew 188 enquiries and applications, but enrolment was limited to 101 students.

"We have stretched the course to take everyone we can," says Devlin, who is hopeful of another expansion — perhaps to 150 students — next year.

The course, which will graduate its first pupil this year, moves students through the various stages of the Voix et Images program toward a diploma in the French language.

Devlin credits instructors — qualified both academically and in audio-visual methods — with the large number of students who enrolled in the program for their second year.

"Almost 65 per cent returned, and a majority of those who didn't come back say they intend to return later," he says.

Judging by the demand for the UVic course — despite Victoria's "Anglophile image" — Devlin finds it "very sad, that such an opportunity is not available in every community."

Cards a Bother

DEAR ABBY: Last year I told my mother-in-law that sending Christmas cards was such a bother I wasn't going to send any the next year.

She said, "You have to! If it's too much bother, just send them to my side of the family."

I told her that if I sent cards to her side, it would appear that I cared less for my side, so I was just going to skip the whole thing. Perhaps I should mention that my husband agrees with my point of view.

Well, I have just received a big box of Christmas cards — with my husband's and my name printed on them. It was a gift from my mother-in-law, with a note, "Just send these cards to my side of the family, or I won't be able to face them."

Abby, what am I supposed to do? I am 34 years old and don't want this nervy woman making my decisions for me. —Burned Up.

DEAR BURNED: Thank your mother-in-law for the cards and do as you please. And tell her she need not feel "embarrassed" because mature people do not hold parents responsible for the acts (or omissions) of their grown offspring.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, December 3, 1972

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Area that was "under wraps" may surge to forefront. Could involve marriage, money, joint efforts, deeds, legacy. Handle responsibility. Utilize past experience. Insist on dealing from position of strength.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message. You will appeal to more persons. You can round out program, project which brings added recognition. But don't insist, cajole or chide. Applies expecially in relationships with partner, mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends pitch in and help you achieve basic goal. Leo plays prominent role. Get going. Don't procrastinate. Stress original approach. Be independent in that you adhere to style, principles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Follow through on hunch. Perceive pulse of public. Don't be dismayed by one who has little faith. One in authority helps get creative juices flowing. Be receptive. You receive inspirational message.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Social activity is accelerated. You are drawn in two directions. Key is to be aware of security without being bogged down to outmoded concept. Co-operate with Gemini. Invite professional associate to dinner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Forces tend to be scattered. You may be trying to do too much at once. Pacing now is important. Develop ideas. Avoid premature moves. Relatives are argumentative. Walk away from foolish dispute. Check fine print.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be ready for change of scenery. Situation is mobile. Know it and prepare accordingly. Gemini and Virgo could be involved. Accent is on income, personal possessions. Mate, partner discusses budget.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be a self-starter. Get going on special project. Family member should be included in plans. Talk in direct but diplomatic manner. Means state case but show you are not inflexible. Taurus and Libra could be in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be doing things which require the utmost discretion. Know it and act accordingly. Don't fool yourself. Face facts. If you are ashamed, admit it. If not, go forth without deliberately irritating others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be getting too much too soon. Means be wary of what you request. You are likely to receive it — all at once. Key now is to be responsible. You get greater rewards, opportunities. Don't play games.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Activity is concentrated on angle of chart related to standing in community, profession, ambition. Relative may be pushing too hard. You have life of your own to live. And you have right to make your own decisions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New deal may be in offing. You could travel or communicate with one at a distance. Status quo is shaken. Be ready for enlarged horizons. See beyond the immediate. Money question will be settled.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY emotional pressure will be relieved. You enter cycle of productivity. If single, you could marry in 1973. Most significant month of that year will be September. You are a versatile person, fond of travel, capable of entertaining and have somewhat of a weight problem.

Forecast for Monday, December 4, 1972

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look ahead toward travel and greater ability to communicate. Plan advertising, publicity campaign. Fine now for writing, publishing, adding to knowledge. Begin study of foreign language. Catch up on correspondence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Strive for greater independence. One who controls budget is willing to give if you display originality, enthusiasm. Be inventive. Means adhere to individual style. Don't follow crowd. Check needs of dependents.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Time now is on your side. Refuse to be stampeded into hasty decisions. Protect security. Check legal papers. Consult mate, partner. Cooperate with Aquarian. Be aware of need for public relations. Your story deserves to be told.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Work and health prove dominant factors. Don't try to accomplish too much at once. Light touch wins. Avoid one who insists, chides. Good humor now is essential. Make plans which include visits, travel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Affairs which concern children, schools, investments are apt to be paramount. Stress creativity. Tear down in order to rebuild. You need not be confined, restricted. Key is to accept change. Get rid of outmoded concepts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Conflict could exist between duty and desire. Key is to be analytical. Be sure that what you think you want is actually for you. Gemini could be involved. You probably would do best by remaining home for time being.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Entertain relatives, neighbors at home. Stress diplomacy. Make conciliatory gesture to family member. Display versatility, sense of humor. You may be called upon to perform many tasks. You are capable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money, personal possessions — these are emphasized. Don't give up something of value for mere promise. Pisces is apt to be in picture. Take inventory. Know what it is you want, what you are willing to give in return.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar position coincides with chance to succeed in new enterprise. Take initiative. Trust your own judgment. Accent personality, appearance. Lead rather than follow. You are called upon to perform special mission.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Work behind scenes. One you have doubts about may make unusual proposal. Visit friend who is temporarily confined. Adhere to principles of Golden Rule. Aries figures prominently. Be discreet. Secret is revealed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friends, hopes and wishes — this area is spotlighted. Welcome new contacts. What appears a casual meeting could develop into meaningful relationship. Know it and respond accordingly. Surprise is due.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Reputation may be on the line. Realize this and refuse to be exploited. Know difference between genuine admiration and false flattery. Set sights on goal. You get what you want if steady pace is maintained.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a frank individual. You usually mean what you say. Not everyone likes you, but most persons admire your basic honesty. You have been through a trying period. Your efforts, however, will be rewarded. August will be your most significant month in 1973.

Worms in Eyes

TORONTO (CP) — Eye specialists here have found two species of tapeworm in the eyes of two Ontario women, the first time either parasite has been reported in humans.

Discovery of the parasites — one normally found in frogs and the other in such wild animals as foxes — is reported by doctors Michael Shea, Alan Maberley and John Walters of St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto.

The first patient, a 29-year-old housewife, had a "wiggling shadow" obscure part of her vision. Parasitologists identified the frog worm and asked the woman whether she had been handling frogs.

She had. Frogs legs had been a favorite dish in her family for five generations.

Buses Generate Less Pollution

By THE ENVIRONMENTAL CENTRE
Of Greater Victoria

There are visible pollutants and there are invisible pollutants. No doubt there are pollutants we don't even know about yet. The most obvious kinds of pollution aren't necessarily the worst for our environment.

QUESTION: Not long ago I attended a panel discussion on the environment at which one of the panelists, Dr. Scott Wallace, our Oak Bay MLA, said he did not favor replacing automobiles with "stinky buses." I agree that buses are stinky, but aren't they really less of a source of pollution than cars? — D.A.

ANSWER: Generally speaking, yes — for several reasons.

The principal difference between the bus and most automobiles besides size is the type of engine. Buses are powered by diesel and although they may smell worse, they are in fact causing less pollution in some respects than gasoline-powered cars.

Diesel engines burn their fuel much more completely, John Geater, diesel mechanic instructor at Camosun College, explained to us. And it is the products of incomplete combustion that pollute our air. The diesel engine, Geater said, is 35 per cent efficient in terms of fuel utilization while gasoline engines are only 25 per cent efficient.

Highly Toxic

Further, the more complete combustion of fuel in the diesel engine results in the production of carbon dioxide. Automobiles, however, with their incomplete combustion of fuel, produce carbon monoxide which is highly toxic to humans.

That carbon dioxide produced by the bus is a pollutant, too, but not nearly as toxic as carbon monoxide. Carbon dioxide, of course, occurs naturally as a by-product of the respiration of our own bodies. Carbon monoxide is almost completely a product of our technology.

While the more complete combustion of the diesel engine produces less emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons, it may be responsible for the release of more nitrogen oxides, according to another source we checked.

There are other factors. Gasoline, for example, contains lead — a serious pollutant. Diesel fuel is lead-free. Another thing you should consider when comparing the relative cleanliness of cars and buses is the brakes. Geater pointed out that most buses operate with standard gear shifts, to much of the braking is done with the engine. Cars, on the other hand, tend to have automatic transmissions and thus rely more heavily on brakes for stopping or slowing down. Wear on brakes gives off harmful asbestos particles as well as PCBs, substances which are similar to DDT in their effects on the environment.

More Efficient

Being more efficient, the bus's diesel engine uses less fuel than would a comparable-sized gasoline engine. Further, a given quantity of crude oil can produce more diesel fuel than it will yield gasoline. There is the depletion of this resource to consider.

But aren't buses more smokey than cars? Not necessarily, Geater told us. Smoke you see puffing out of the exaust of a diesel bus or truck is the result of overfueling, he said. If the diesel engine is operating properly, there'll be no smoke.

Finally, one major consideration is the number of people a diesel-powered bus carries. We will agree with Wallace that nearly empty buses offer little to improve the environment. However, it only takes a few of us leaving our cars in the garage and going by bus, before the environment benefits. And remember, every time we use public transportation, we are voting for its improvement.

QUESTION: Regarding your answer about dishwasher detergents (November 18). I tried using a little plain soap and washing soda as Derrick Mallard of SPEC suggested. Suds got so thick inside the machine that the mechanism wouldn't work properly. Further, sudsy water spewed out around the door and flooded the kitchen floor. This happened not only during the wash cycle, but also during the rinse cycles. I had to put the thing through four rinses to get all the suds out. Do you still say soap is worth trying in an automatic dishwasher?

ANSWER: Possibly not in your dishwasher, although you should be able to get satisfactory results by cutting down on the amount of soap until you find the correct amount for your machine. Our water in Victoria is so soft that very little soap (or detergent too) goes a long way, as you have found out!

Besides using less, you could also try varying the soap — washing soda ratio,, perhaps more washing soda and less soap (the soda works without sudsing). Good luck, and let us know if you find the magic formula. Others will be interested too.

QUESTION: I've succeeded in getting my neighbour to sort his garbage for recycling, but he collects his cans, glass, etc. in big plastic bags. Wouldn't boxes be better?—S.H.

ANSWER: Yes. Cardboard boxes or paper bags are recyclable themselves but the plastic bags are not. Boxes also make it easier for you to sort your trash at the recycle depot.

Also, it is better not to send non-recyclable trash to the dump in plastic bags. Use paper bags instead. When they're buried at the landfill, paper bags decompose and permit quicker breakdown of the refuse inside.

Do you have a question about our environment? Send it to "It's Our Environment," in care of the Times. We'll take it up with the experts and give you an answer.

Women's Status Survey Results 'Surprising'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The findings of Status, Anyone? A 42-page compilation of interviews taken from a random samplng of 650 households, surprised even the researchers, who were hired by the Status of Women Council.

They were to study the status of women in Vancouver, Burnaby, North and West Vancouver.

Carole Anne Soong, co-ordinator of the six-week project, said the researchers found that:

—Of the married women working outside their homes more than one-half do so because of financial necessity;

—One-third of the women interviewed suffer actual on-the-job discrimination but are afraid to report it because they might lose their jobs or be labelled "troublemakers";

—Far from the widely-held theory that women won't support other women, 93 per cent of those interviewed would cross party lines to vote for a qualified woman candidate.

None of the researchers expected the "absolute paranoia" aroused by the very mention of women's liberation, said Soong.

The reactions of the men were interesting, she said. One researcher said a man grabbed the questionnaire from her, crumpled it and threw it into the street when he read Status of Women Council on it. Another man slammed the door, saying:

"My wife doesn't have any opinions."

One of the surprises was the need — noted by 96 per cent of the women interviewed — for people readily available through homemaker services to cook and keep house for families, in those emergencies when the mother must leave the home.

Race Important In Teen-Age Sex

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Income doesn't count, residence is very important and race appears to be a significant factor in the sex experience of unmarried teenage girls, according to a study just released.

The study, conducted last year by John F. Kanter and Melvin Zelnik, both sociologists at Johns Hopkins University, was published in the current issue of Family Planning Perspectives, the quarterly journal of Planned Parenthood-World Population's centre for family planning program development.

It estimated that nearly 2.4 million never-married women in the 15 to 19-year-old age group — about 28 per cent of all such young women — were sexually experienced. And it said the survey data suggested that over the past five years "premarital intercourse (among teenagers) is beginning at younger ages and that its extent is increasing."

Better Off

According to the survey, poor girls are not more likely than those better off to have had premarital sexual intercourse as teenagers.

About three in 10 poor unmarried girls aged 15-17 and about the same proportion of those who are not poor, have had sexual relations. By the time they are 18, about four in 10 of each group and by age 19, about half of each group are sexually experienced, the study said.

Kanter and Zenlik also found that premarital intercourse among teenagers varies little by region, but that farm residence is associated with comparatively low levels of sexual experience while those who migrate from farms to cities are more likely to have had intercourse than others.

Race, however, does seem to be a significant factor, the study said. "We find that roughly twice the proportion of blacks 15-19 have had intercourse as whites — 54 per cent compared to 23 per cent," the study said.

Exception

It said that within almost all of the socioeconomic and sociocultural groupings of unmarried teenage girls, blacks are far more likely to have had coitus than whites.

An exception to this finding was the group of girls with fathers who are college graduates. About three in 10 of both blacks and whites in this group have had intercourse.

The study also said that while a higher proportion of blacks are found to be sexually experienced, blacks reported having intercourse less frequently and with fewer partners than did whites.

UBC Teacher to Teach Teaching

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stephen Foster has devised a new course for the University of British Columbia: it will teach teachers how to teach teachers how to teach.

Foster, a psychology professor in UBC's education faculty, said this week that the course is the first of its kind ever offered in B.C., and that a version of the course will be taught to Douglas College faculty starting in January and at UBC next fall.

He said the course is designed for graduate students who plan to teach in colleges and for faculty members who already are teaching. Although the main purpose is to instruct teachers how to teach others to teach still other school teachers, it can be adapted to teach teachers of other subjects, such as history, Foster said.

Course content includes learning theory, test construction, teaching machines and instructional psychology.

Frank Echols, a faculty colleague of Foster's, said too many people assume that an advanced degree in education or history enables a person to teach.

He said Foster's course should help a person with a PhD in a subject but who "has no conception about how to get it across" to students.

STOLEN ART WORKS FOUND UNDER BRIDGE

MESTRE, Italy (Reuter) — Police reported today the recovery of valuable paintings by Francisco Goya and Guido Reni stolen from a nearby villa last month.

They were found hidden under a road bridge with three other paintings stolen at the same time.

The work by Goya, the 18th century Spanish master, represented a country scene, while that by 17th-century Italian master Guido Reni showed the death of Saint Sebastian. The other paintings were by lesser known Italian artists.

Police did not name the owner of the villa from which they had been stolen.

Asia Comes of Age—As Polluter

By The Associated Press

Over Asia's big cities, from Sapporo to Singapore, dirty smudges obscure the once-clear air, visible testimony to industrial progress and the ills it brings.

As the gross national product climbs, it begins to eradicate the encrusted poverty of centuries. But the factories belching smoke in fields where oxen once plowed their furrows have brought unwelcome byproducts with them: poisonous chemicals and metals which extinguish life in the rivers, bays and seas; noxious vapors polluting the air and industrial noises affecting human life and efficiency.

Ten years ago, Asian governments clamored for the capital and the factories which they equated with the good life.

Today, as elsewhere, this region finds itself grappling with pollution problems which seem almost insurmountable.

The crisis is not only machines but people. In an area which contains more than a billion human beings, the greatest polluter is man.

Where pollution is concerned, the lucky countries are those which have yet to achieve full industrialization. Among them are Burma and Indonesia.

The alternatives which confront Asian planners are limited. They could make the politically unpopular decision to slow down the quickening pace of the industry which brings millions a desperately needed higher standard of living. Or they could seek the help of the international community in obtaining the loans and the techniques to overcome the crisis.

Whichever course is followed will prove costly.

That the manace is real and immediate can be seen from the reports of Associated Press correspondents which follow:

JAPAN

A decade ago, writes Tokyo-based John Roderick, Japan was electrified by Prime Minister Hayato Ikeka's plans for doubling the Japanese income.

Successive leaders have pushed forward his vision, exceeding and improving on it until Japan now ranks third industrially in the world.

But Japan's 104 million people have begun to question whether the game is worth the candle. Now Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka has unveiled a blueprint for resettling the industries in the countryside and building satellite cities.

The prospect of spreading out the pollution and overburdening the rural areas with more people has aroused resistance.

Millions are crowded into inadequate homes with insufficient sewage, jostling daily for space on overloaded trains and buses, and subjected to the varied dangers of contaminated food, proliferating automobiles, nerve-shattering noise and poisoned air.

Figures for 1970 show Japan had 18,059,000 cars concentrated in an area 1.7 per cent the size of California.

In 1970, only 22 per cent of the country had sewer systems.

It is an unfeeling phrase, but "people pollution" describes the dilemma of most of Asia.

Despite more than one million abortions a year, overcrowding is a constant irritant and a potential for disaster for the Japanese.

> Asia, seeking capital and industry to bring the "good life" to its people, has become the greatest polluter of all. In the following story Associated Press correspondents in Asia report on the situation affecting more than one billion people.

SOUTH KOREA

From Seoul, correspondent K. P. Hong reported that smog and pollution have become major problems in the South Korean capital of nearly six million people.

The Seoul metropolitan sanitation office measured the sulphur dioxide gas level in the city and said it was higher than the international allowable level.

To combat pollution, the sanitation office recommended that factories and big buildings in the downtown area be moved outside the capital. But implementation is not so simple, the officials noted.

TAIWAN

From Taipei, Maurus Young reported that a five-year program was started in 1969 to improve Taiwan's environmental sanitation. The program is aimed at strengthening air and water pollution control and providing tap water for more rural villages. It also will feature a better waste disposal system.

For air pollution control work, a total of 59 monitoring stations were set up around the island in 1971.

As for water pollution on the island, the most seriously polluted streams are those in areas with heavy industrial concentrations.

Government sources said in the Hsintien River, which supplies 80 per cent of Taipei's drinking water, there are about 50,000 colibacilli in each 100 cubic centimetres of water. A count of 5,000 of the bacteria for every 100 cubic centimetres is considered the danger line.

HONG KONG

In Hong Kong, correspondent Ronnie Wei reported the tiny British colony with four million population is becoming increasingly pollution conscious, but conservationists say it has a long way to go to clean up what they call one of the dirtiest cities in Asia.

Perhaps the most serious Hong Kong pollution problem is lack of a good sewage treatment system. Hong Kong dumps an average of 195 million gallons of human wastes daily in Hong Kong harbor.

THAILAND

Until the 1950s, reports correspondent Surin Ruangdej, Bangkok was a beautiful city decorated with trees, parks and clean canals.

But Erb Nabangchang, Thailand's pollution fighter for the last 12 years with the ministry of public health, says a serious hazard for Bangkok people has existed since 1966.

Bankok, a city of more than three million people, has no adequate public sewage system. Garbage and trash are dumped in streets, canals and the river.

Because of Erb's repeated warnings, the National Executive Council which took power in a coup d'etat last November, has begun a vast clean-up campaign in the Bangkok metropolitan area.

The government began by ordering all boats out of the canals which criss-cross the city.

INDONESIA

From Jakarta, Ghafur Fadyl reported that the Indonesian government does not regard pollution as a serious problem. Indonesian industries, they said, are still in the embryonic stage.

Indonesia's minister of mining, Sumatri Brodjonegoro, said the government soon will issue regulations for foreign oil companies operating in Indonesia to keep pollution at a minimum level.

INDIA

From New Delhi, correspondent Bill Mann reported the decision facing India is whether to impede industrial development, with which it had planned to improve the lifestyles of one-sixth of the world's population, or to save the land for its millions born into squalor every year. It has set up a commission to draw the line but has done little else.

WORKERS HAVE THREE-DAY WEEK

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Gordon Shrum, the retiring chariman of the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority, says workers already have a three-day work week when you add up the time they are paid for but aren't actually working.

In a speech to the Canadian Pension Conference Shrum, who steps down from his post on Jan. 1, said employees actually spend 20 per cent of their paid working time in sick leave, holidays and coffee breaks and only two-thirds of the remaining time is actually spent working.

Shrum also said retirements should be preceded by a period of decreased activity, a "phasing down" to prepare for not working.

HOW HYPNOSIS HELPS

By George W. Knox, Ph.D. Certified Psychologist

Hypnosis Helps Block Off Unneeded Pain

Of the various sensory systems it is most desirable to be able to shut off pain. Although pain serves a useful purpose of informing us when something is wrong, unneeded pain causes a great amount of unnecessary suffering. Hypnosis can relieve this unnecessary suffering without having the frequent undesirable side effects produced by chemical anesthesia. In the usual case where hypnosis is used in preparation for an operation it is used in conjunction with, rather than instead of, the chemical anesthesia and reduces the amount of chemical aid that is needed.

A lot of benefit is derived by using hypnotic suggestion before an operation to reduce the anticipated anxiety and fear. Fear and pain are closely related and the reduction of fear automatically reduces the intensity of pain.

The use of hypnosis during minor operations which involve only local anesthesia is of special value because a relaxed patient can co-operate with the doctor and enable him to perform a more satisfactory operation. The use of hypnosis at the dentist chair is perhaps the best example of this benefit of hypnosis. Not only is hypnosis of benefit before and during an operation but post operative recovery is enhanced.

Chris...'A Cocky Brash Kid Who's Putting the World On'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — His fellow songwriters call him a genius who's too far ahead of his time to be understood.

His music publishers call him a cocky, brash kid who's putting himself and the entire world on.

And his audiences say he's a fascinating performer who can leave you dazzled one second and annoyed the next.

Whatever the case, Chris Gantry can play the dickens out of a guitar and thrash out a lyric that leaves you perplexed—not quite knowing whether to weep, laugh or study it like a poem.

At 29, he's regarded as one of the most brilliant but enigmatic singer-songwriters this music town has ever run into. He's been called the "Nashville poet," "the world's biggest put-on artist" and "a man who was doing four years ago what Kris Kristofferson is doing nowadays."

"I don't know whether Gantry is a tortured soul or a free spirit," says one of Nashville's better known songwriters. "I'd say he's a free spirit."

Trying to describe Gantry's musical mode is a virtual impossibility because his style is unlike anyone else's. His most recent published product, an album entitled Motormouth, has to be one of the most fascinating blends of country, folk and rock music ever devised.

"I'm a songwriter first," says Gantry. "I sing what I write and I don't dig specializing in one kind of music."

Despite his vast repertoire, Gantry remains primarily a "street picker" who peddles his work from one local club to another—not really giving a hoot whether anyone accepts him or not. Or so he says.

Gantry came to Nashville in 1963 from Jamaica, N.Y., where his father was an auctioneer. Two years ago he moved to a farm in nearby Franklin, a place he calls "my rock 'n' roll turkey farm."

Before that, he said, "I lived on the streets of Nashville just like everybody else trying to make it in this business."

In a recent interview, which came on the heels of an impressive performance, Gantry detailed his attitude on life and music. He appeared disgusted with his musical surroundings and said he's on the verge of chucking his career. It went like this:

"I'm going to write for one more year and turn in all my songs and let it go where it may. Then, I'm going to split this town and live a little. I'll probably go to the South Sea islands.

"Competition is wrong. It shouldn't have any place in music. When I first came here, I gave my all for everybody. I hung out at the right places and paid my dues.

"But when I wanted to do something that was really me, all the publishers turned their backs.

"Any time money is the end of a musical product, it's immediately screwed up."

Here's a Circus for Canadians

By VICTOR STANTON
Kitchener-Waterloo Record

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A group of Kitchener-Waterloo businessmen is putting together a three-ring circus with the emphasis on a Canadian theme, a clean, family-show image and an honest deal for sponsoring service clubs.

Canadian Circus Inc., owned, managed and directed entirely by Canadians, already has been booked for an initial-season six-week tour of Ontario and Quebec, starting with a Sept. 5-9, 1973, engagement at Montreal's Paul Sauve Arena.

That first season will take the circus, which to date has lined up 90 per cent of its acts, from Thunder Bay to Quebec City, and may be expanded by another two to three weeks.

Ross Marshall, a former broadcaster and local promoter with personal circus experience, is president of the newly-formed circus which will maintain business offices in Kitchener while housing and rehearsing its acts in Sarasota, Fla.

Mr. Marshall said in an interview that of necessity most of the acts will be performed by Americans, since Canadians have no history in the field.

The headline act will be The Coronas, a family of five aerial performers who also occupy an honorary position on the circus board of directors as artistic advisers.

CROSS OVER FALLS

Mr. Marshall said that if a permit can be obtained this act will launch a publicity drive at the start of the tour with a crossing over the Niagara gorge on the high wire. Such a feat was first performed in 1859 by the Great Blondin, an ancestor of the Czech-born Coronas.

In all, the Canadian Circus will feature just under 30 acts in 50 different production numbers. In addition to dogs, horses and monkeys, there will be 53 animal performers, including nine elephants.

Mr. Marshall himself will be ringmaster, and Frank Varga of Kitchener will be the producing clown, the individual who works out the routines for the funny men of the circus.

Another Canadian involved in the production end is David J. McLaren, a young area rock musician who will be director of music. A drummer and vocalist, he will head a five-member circus band and will be updating the traditional circus music to make it more appealing to today's youth. He expects that all but the organist in the band will be Canadians.

Mr. Marshall said it took "approximately $250,000 to get Canadian Circus off the ground and we will have a weekly operating cost of about $50,000."

Keeping the family in mind, the circus owners plan to hold an adult admission down to a maximum of $3.50.

M. M. (Mel) Corney, a vice-president and director of national sales, said:

"We want to put the circus on the road where the average family can see it. Why, there's a whole generation who has never seen a circus."

Canadian Circus Inc. also will benefit communities it visits through a no-risk sponsorship by local service clubs.

GALLUP POLL

Majority Said Lewis Right

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

When NDP Leader David Lewis built his election campaign on the theme that big corporations were not paying their fair share of taxes, the majority of Canadians (54%) were in agreement with him. Only a third as many people (18%) were ready to deny this claim and say that the corporations were paying their full share. A large segment (28%) remained undecided on the controversy.

In the west this belief that corporations are not paying the taxes they should rises to the highest level of 60%. Elsewhere it runs at about 50%. Ontario (21%) and Quebec (18%) show the highest levels of those citizens who believe corporations are being taxed at the right levels. Maritimers share the opinions of westerners with only 13% of the opinion the taxes were fair. Indecision (37%)is at its highest level in the Maritimes, running at lower, but similar levels in the other areas.

The study was carried out in at-home interviews with a random sample of 671 adults on October 20-21. A sample of this size produces results accurate within a 4 percentage point margin of error, 19 out of 20 times.

The question:

"Do you think that under the present system the big corporations are paying their fair sharee of taxes or not?"

The table below compares national and regional opinions.

	Yes	No	Undecided
CANADA	18%	54%	28%
Maritimes	13	50	37
Quebec	18	53	29
Ontario	21	51	28
West	15	60	25

In the same study, interviewers asked whether or not those selected for questioning had heard of the criticisms made by David Lewis on the tax structure for big corporations. Nationally the people split into those who had (51%) and those who had not (49%). Again Quebec and the West were in dramatic contrast, with almost a direct reversal of experience. In Quebec 30% had heard of the criticisms made by Mr. Lewis, but 70% had not. In the West, 67% had heard of them, and only 33% had not. In Ontario about six in ten knew of them, while about four in ten had not. The Maritimes were very closely divided with about half the adult population in each segment.

The table below shows the impact made by Mr. Lewis, nationally and regionally.

	Yes	No
CANADA	51%	49%
Maritimes	48	52
Quebec	30	70
Ontario	58	42
West	67	33

'WRITING' FROM PRE-HISTORY

TORONTO (CP) — A bone unearthed in France that contains symbols engraved by man at least 135,000 years ago was described Friday as one of the key finds in archeology by a researcher at Harvard University's Peabody Museum of Archeology and Ethnology.

Alexander Marshack, in a paper prepared for the American Anthropological Association, analysed the find as a "prewriting" step by early man.

The bone, part of an ox rib, was found at Peche de l'Aze, France, by Francois Bordes, director of the Laboratory of Pre-history at the University of Bordeaux.

Marshack noted that the age of the find, 135,000 to 150,000 years old, dated this work as that of Acheulian hunters of the period 50,000 to 75,000 years before Neanderthal man was producing symbols.

"The bone documents a surprisingly high level of intentional image — and symbol-making thousands of years before Neanderthal man and before the full development of modern man," he said.

The researcher rated the engraved bone as comparable to the discovery of the first man-like skulls and tools.

He said it provided "the first clue" to the origins of later symbolism and, "still later, true art and notation."

Paish Hired To Study Coal Port

Environmentalist Howard Paish of Vancouver has been hired by the B.C. government as an analyst to study the proposed relocation of the Squamish coal port, a spokesman in the premier's office confirmed today.

Paish's duties will be to conduct an environmental study of the coal port proposal, the spokesman said.

B.C. Railway announced last week it proposed to relocate the port at Mamquam Blind Channel, adjacent to the Squamish estuary area.

Dead Whales Found

PORTO ALEGRE, Brazil (Reuter) — A possible "suicide squad" of 30 whales has been found washed ashore 160 miles south of here, authorities said Thursday. The whales, all in a state of decomposition, were stretched out like beached submarines along the sandy beach. The leader of a school of whales, it is believed, sometimes purposely leads his charges to a beach to die.

AGE CATCHES UP WITH GREGORY

SARCO, Israel (AP) — Gregory Peck stands on location on the dusty street of this Israeli movie town and says his favorite western was The Gunfighter, which he made in 1950 and which is still described as the first adult western.

But this is a grizzled Gregory Peck, looking somewhat like Gabby Hayes although younger and taller. Now 56, Peck admits: "Sure I like to do westerns. I guess I made about 10 or so beginning with Duel In The Sun in 1946."

He wears his wide-brim hat Pony Express style, and smooths his black beard flecked with white, and thinks about westerns and the life they describe.

"Westerns go back to our roots, our heritage if you will. The western is easy to tell. You can say so much with the camera alone, without much dialogue. Of course they didn't say much in those days."

Peck walks to the end of Sarco's dusty street and enters the film company's air-conditioned motor home, brought all the way from California.

He recalls his boyhood in La Jolla, Calif., in the 1920s, of seeing tottering Civil War veterans parading down a dirt street.

And he remembers with fondness his western grandfather who owned a livery stable "and had a white beard longer than mine."

"I can still see the yellow tobacco stain in it."

He pauses: "Those were the last days of a fading era and I was lucky to see and remember it. We're still telling their story in films."

This brings Peck to the business at hand, starring in Billy Two Hats with Desi Arnaz Jr. and Jack Warden.

The picture gets its name from a half-breed played by young Arnaz. "His father had two hats, Billy's mother recalls, hence the name," explains Peck. "It's a nice straightforward story and it's told simply."

Billy Two Hats, budgeted for $1.1 million, is the first big western to be shot in Israel. Norman Jewison's Algonquin Films is making it for United Artists.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man with 47 years experience in criminal activity was sentenced to one day in jail for theft under $200 by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Friday.

Amos Clarkin, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to stealing a $35 hat from the T. Eaton Company Nov. 8.

Ostler asked the man his age and after contemplating the question the accused replied, "I was born in 1902 which makes me pretty old."

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Clarkin's criminal record dates back to 1925 with a conviction as recent as Sept. 8 of this year.

Clarkin told the court he'd quit "boozing."

"As long as I'm off that I won't be stealing from millionaires like Eaton's or the Bay," he said.

"Well you're a pretty hearty soul. You've been stealing for nearly 50 years," said Ostler.

Clarkin said he had trouble talking because his teeth had been knocked out.

"He thinks he can't talk. I don't know what he'd be like if he had teeth," said Ostler.

Clarkin said his plans for the future included trapping muskrats.

A 17-year-old youth was sentenced to five months definite and six months indeterminate for breach of probation and breaking and entering and theft.

Edward Allen Smith, 1024 Tillicum, was arrested Nov. 28 after breaking a window at High Rock Junior High School, 641 Head St., and stealing small items such as paper and envelopes.

On Sept. 29 he was fined $100 and placed on six months' probation for theft under $200. He was charged with breach of probation after his conviction of breaking and entering and theft.

★ ★ ★

An 18-year-old man was given a suspended sentence and a one-year probationary term for three counts of breaking and entering and theft, two counts of attempted breaking and entering, and one count of breaking and entering with intent.

Ian Duncan MacDonald, 242 Montreal, was employed at one of the shops at 45 Bastion Square and had a key to the main building, a Victoria detective testified.

Using the key, he entered the building Oct. 18 and committed the offences at various shops inside. Items worth a total of $302 were stolen.

On Nov. 16 he went to Victoria police department and admitted to the offences.

"What in the world possessed you to do such a thing. It was a foolish, irresponsible thing to do and you've got yourself a criminal record," said Ostler.

★ ★ ★

Catherine Margaret Wendorf, 18, of 406-1337 Saunders, was fined $300 for stealing items worth a total of $66.08 from the Hudson's Bay Nov. 30.

A store security officer testified that the woman had $4.70 on her person when apprehended and her bank deposit book showed a balance of $386.45.

"I didn't steal because I needed it," said Wendorf.

"You were excessively greedy," said Ostler.

★ ★ ★

Ian Douglas Bruce, 18, of 590 St. Patrick, was given a suspended sentence and a six-month probationary term for possession of a narcotic.

He was a passenger in a car stopped by Oak Bay police on Foul Bay Road and a hash-pipe containing cannibas resin was found on his person.

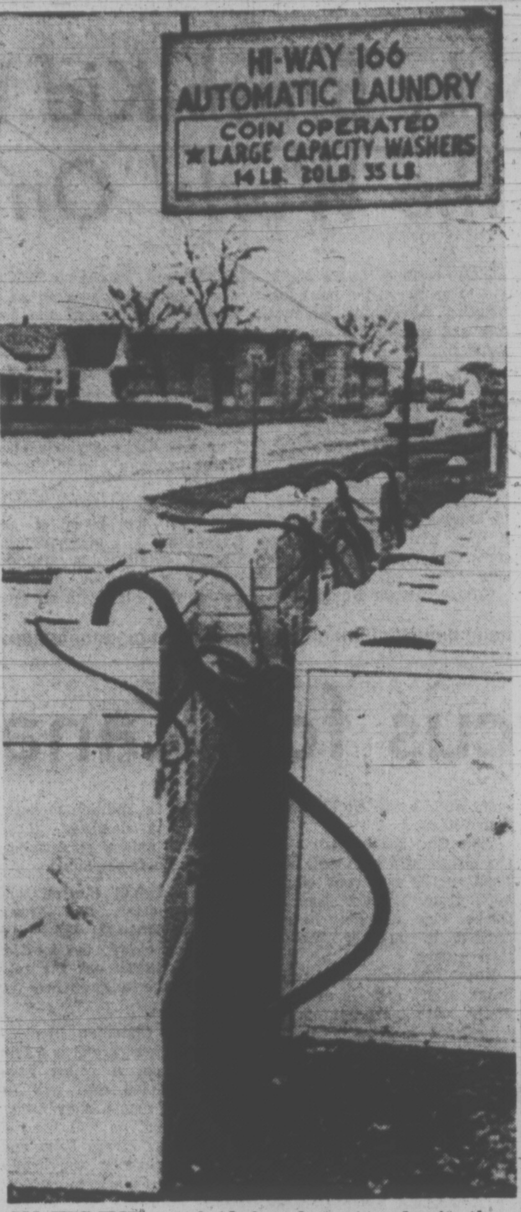
In traffic court, Frank Edward George, 26, of 892 Brock, was fined $350 by Judge Harold Alder for impaired driving.



NO IT'S NOT a curbside laundromat — despite the sign and the equipment plonked by the roadside. It just happens to be a temporary state of affairs while the owners of this laundromat in Coffeyville, Kansas, are waiting for new equipment to arrive and the old machines are standing by the side of the road waiting to be loaded onto a truck to take them to a disposal site. Everything happened to be lined up in this fashion when a photographer drove by . . . and, what else would you expect a camera-bug to do, but take a picture?

ID Bill Passed

SALISBURY (Reuter) — A controversial bill requiring Africans to carry identity passes and making it illegal for them to leave the country without a government permit, passed the committee stage in the predominantly white Rhodesian Parliament Thursday.

Quads Born

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Israel's third set of quadruplets in two weeks was born at the Asaf Harofeh Hospital near here Thursday. The three boys and a girl were born to Mrs. Pninah Bronstein, 26, who had been given fertility drug treatment.

Unions Won't Support Women's Claim to Pay

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — The oldest and most expensive wage claim in the history of the international trade union movement —equal pay for women—still looks a long way from settlement.

And much of the problem arises from the attitude of the unions themselves.

The claim is a well-worn demand that has been gaining ground ever since the women's liberation movement began hitting the headlines. On a worldwide basis, women are believed to earn on average 27 per cent less than men.

But a fundamental problem is that the vast majority of rank-and-file trade unionists are men, many of whom are not likely to take strike action to support their women colleagues.

The key factor became clear at a recent three-day international conference here organized with the express purposes of bringing the equal pay problem home to the public.

The meeting was organized by the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU), which for years has campaigned to get support for the principle of equal pay for men and women doing work of equal value.

But ICFTU chief Otto Kersten conceded after the conference that he did not foresee strike action in the near future in support of the women's demand.

He doubted whether unions would be prepared at this time to strike at national let alone European level.

This view, a gloomy one for the feminists, was echoed in a detailed report on the equal pay battle drawn up for the Brussels conference by ICFTU experts.

DISASTER: 55 YEARS AGO ON MONDAY!

. . . but for Mrs. Wells it's still as vivid as yesterday's memories

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Monday will be just another day for most people but for Mrs. Robert Wells, 86, of 1838 Newton, it's the anniversary of a miracle.

She is one of the surviyors of the explosion that racked Halifax Dec. 6, 1917, snatching 1,600 lives, leaving 20,000 homeless and causing $50 million property damage.

Although it is 55 years later the events of that day are as vivid as ever as she tells her story.

"My husband was in the navy, serving in the Niobe and we had only been in Halifax six weeks. Ida was only 3½ and I was still breast-feeding our son."

At the time of the explosion, shortly before 9 a.m., Mrs. Wells and the baby were lying in a big brass bed, which she claims saved their lives.

She remembers her daughter clamoring for her to get up.

"She was in a hurry because I'd promised her we'd go Christmas shopping," she recalls.

Then came the explosion and the events that followed had to be figured out with the help of her husband because the side of the house was blown in and she was knocked unconscious as the big bed catapulted in two, holding her and the baby in a vise.

★ ★ ★

WELLS

"Bob was among those who were sent to fight the fire on the Imo and he ran up to our place to see what had happened.

"Ida had been blown right through the window and at first he thought she was the old lady next door because her hair was all white with plaster."

Wells managed to haul his baby and wife from the bed, easing them out with a blanket. His wife's long hair was matted with blood, oozing from a cut on her head, the scar of which she still carries.

One floor above, the child of another family had been killed instantaneously when the chimney fell in on her.

Mrs. Wells tells how they made their way to the admiralty grounds, her only protection against the cold being her husband's topcoat over her nightgown and his boots, which he had taken off to protect her from the snow.

Wells carried a blanket and pillow. "But we stripped the pillowcase into bandages because a sailor stopped us and said for God's sake give him something for a woman who was bleeding to death."

The night that followed was a nightmare.

"We met a couple who said we could stay with them. The windows of their place were all gone so we used the lino off the floor to keep the cold out. It snowed all night and the next day there was a terrible snowstorm," she recalls. "There were fires all around us, I couldn't sleep because I thought they were creeping up on us."

The explosion happened on a Thursday. It was Tuesday before the first train was able to leave Halifax.

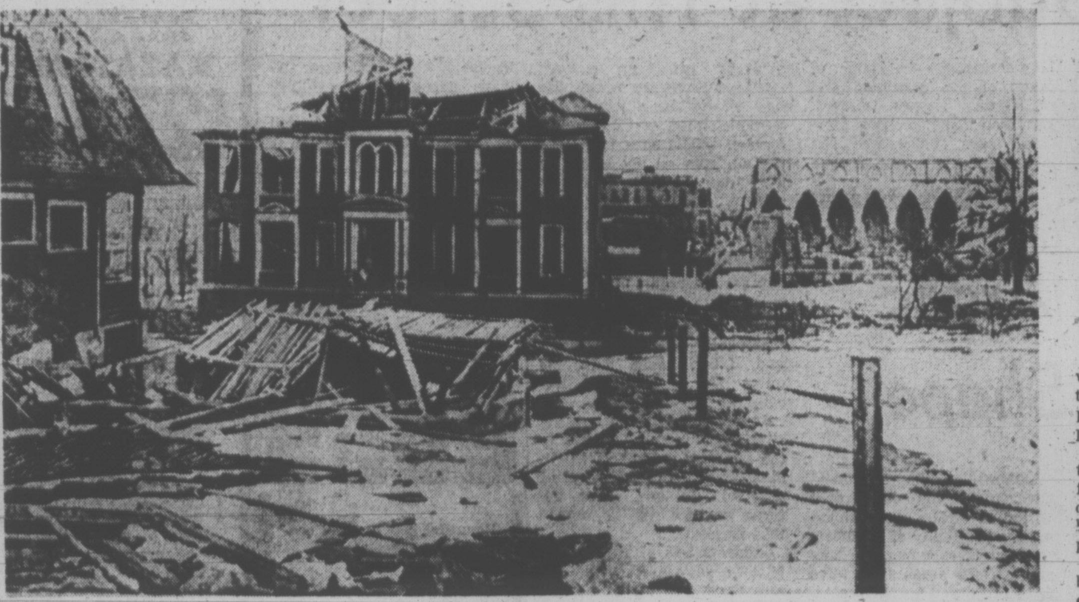
Wells put his wife and children on it, sending them to stay with relatives until he could find another home.

As the train pulled out, he pushed something into his wife's hand which she was to treasure for many years.

It was a message scribbled on the back of a cigarette package.

"It asked me to thank God every day, as he would, for saving my life."

She does.



This is part of the shattered harbor area in Halifax after 1917 disaster

'. . . After a Couple Of Snorts I Felt Better'

Chronicled as the worst disaster of its kind in the world, the agony of those ashore during the 1917 Halifax explosion is well-known.

Little, however, has been told about what happened to the men aboard the two ships, whose collision triggered the disaster.

The saga of those tense hours is contained in two letters sent to retired navy captain Erik Revfem, 2045 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Phased in down-to earth language, they're written by two of the seamen aboard the Norwegian freighter Imo that survived the holocaust which followed her collision with the French munitions ship Mont Blanc, laden with a cargo of 6,000 tons of T.N.T. below and drums of inflammable benzene on her decks.

Revfem's birthplace is Sandefjord, the Imo's home port and, although he didn't know it at the time, his cousin was one of her 39 crew members.

Through relatives, Revfem contacted Sigurd Sorenson and L. H. Skarre. Their story, revealed 55 years later, grabs the imagination.

Skarre tells how the benzene ran out of the ruptured drums, spilling over the Mont Blanc's decks, igniting and running down into the cargo hold. The Mont Blanc's crew were safely away in their lifeboats when, 30 minutes later, the T.N.T. exploded, disintegrating the ship and making a shambles of a great part of the eastern port.

Sorenson was in the Imo's forepeak when the explosion hit. He remembers coming to, thinking he was in the sea because of all the water cascading down.

"As light returned I realized I was still on board," he says. "I next saw somebody lying to the left of me. It was Sigurd Hundstok. He had lost one arm. It was hanging in a piece of skin.

"I went over to the carpenter but his head was smashed. The boatswain close to him was also dead."

Sorenson tells of the horror of having to wrestle with a crew-mate driven mad:

"There was only the trimmer left with us and he was stark crazy. I was supposed to stay on board (the others had been ordered to abandon ship) and lower him down but it turned out to be a difficult job to get hold of him.

"In the end I had to knock him down to stop him. When I got to the bow I couldn't find the others. None of us had any clothes left on. The trimmer had just his trousers' belt, Sigurd Hundstok, a piece of shirt and a remnant of trousers. I was nude on the left side."

Sorenson found some burlap sacks to cover himself and his friends.

After what must have seemed an eternity, he and his mates were rescued by a lifeboat's crew from the cruiser Highflier.

"They gave me a couple of good snorts and a bath," he recalls. "I went over to look in the mirror and got another shock. I was as black as a negro — so were the others — but I hadn't expected to see myself that way."

All that remained of the Mont Blanc, says Skarre, was steel plates and frame parts that divers discovered on the ocean bed.

BAJA
La Paz/Cabo San Lucas
the NEW destination for '73

WHERE'S THAT?
Maybe you think Baja California is in the U.S.A. Well it isn't! It's in Mexico. You may also think of La Paz as the capital of Bolivia, well this La Paz is the capital of Mexico's Baja. It is the "in" place for the vacationer who is looking for somewhere off the beaten track. It's a NEW place for sun, fun, sand and surf, and supreme for skin and scuba diving and deep sea fishing. La Paz still has the charm of Old Mexico with its historical background, mariachi bands and typical Mexican hospitality. There are stores in abundance with wares exotic and intriguing — and restaurants galore. There is always something to see, hear and enjoy in La Paz.

THREE THOUSAND MARLIN?
If you prefer something even more secluded, there is the fantastic CABO SAN LUCAS, the tropical resort at land's end. Here the desert literally meets the sea — an unbelievable thirty miles of virgin beach and secluded coves — a place that is considered by experts to be made for the scuba and snorkel . . . and the sun-worshipper. Cabo San Lucas also claims to be the world's finest fishing spot. As many as 3000 marlin have been caught in one year in local waters.

A "MILLIONAIRE'S" HOLIDAY?
Now CAT has made it possible for you to enjoy this millionaire-type holiday — for as low as $399 CPAir's orange birds will fly you south for two fabulous weeks. TRAVELLING MEDICINE MADE EASY

OTTAWA (CP) — Your handy pocket Spanish phrase book will help you order paella in Palma de Mallorca. But if that rich seafood dish disagrees with your gall bladder, how do you say, "I'm nauseated, I've a sharp pain right here and I'm allergic to penicillin?"

The World Medical Association has come up with something it hopes will help travellers cope with medical emergencies in foreign lands.

It's the association's International Medical Directory, a national Medical Directory, a pocket-sized guide to English-speaking doctors in more than 70 countries around the world.

So if you should come down with a virus in Venice or measles in Madagascar, a quick look in the directory will give you the name, address and telephone number of a local doctor. You may tell him—in English—where it hurts and what he should know about your medical history.

Dr. Arthur Peart, association past president, says the directory would be especially useful for the traveller who has a specific medical problem such as diabetes or epilepsy. This person would feel more confident if he knew he could find a doctor to whom he was able to explain the problem easily.

The directory actually is a new edition, updating information and adding new names. It also contains a list of medical societies through which the names of specialists may be obtained by writing in advance.

Survival Top Subject at This School

FROBISHER BAY, NWT (CP) — Trapping wolves, hunting caribou, skinning seals, and basic survival are all part of the curriculum at Gordon Robertson Educational Centre.

Perched like a giant igloo on a rocky outcrop overlooking Frobisher Bay, the centre is determined to turn out students who are as adept at Arctic survival as at preparing an essay or solving a mathematics problem.

The Alberta school curriculum forms the backbone of many of the academic and vocational courses offered. But Don King, school principal, says the centre has adapted to its northern environment.

Since the majority of its 280 students are from eastern Arctic settlements where life has always been tough, the administration of Gordon Robertson school sees to it that the students do not soften in the white man's education system.

Among the teachers are trappers and hunters.

Students are taken into the Arctic's barren lands and taught to fend for themselves.

"Extensive trapping exercises will take place at Amadjuak Lake, more than 100 miles from here, in December," said Mr. King.

Students will be taken by chartered aircraft and left in the bush for up to two weeks at a time to learn the art of survival. As one group returns another will go out to take its place.

Students will also make the trip by snowmobile, and before the winter is through 100 students will have been to Amadjuak Lake.

"Once there, they will learn how to trap the wolves and the foxes," said Mr. King.

"Their return journey is assured because an aircraft will have already dumped a few thousand gallons of fuel at the other end for their snowmobiles.

"We have to prepare these children for the North, because statistics show that 99 per cent of them who go south come back north," Mr. King said.

The school is also working with the territorial government's game department at Sylvia Grenell Lake, 90 miles northwest of Frobisher Bay, where students learn to fish.

Some of Gordon Robertson's students this winter will have a chance to visit Greenland, where they will be instructed in the Eskimo language and learn about Eskimo culture and folklore.

The trip is being sponsored by the federal government.

Highway to the Arctic Begins to Take Shape

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

EDMONTON (CP) — Work has started on the federal government's all-weather highway to the Arctic and project manager Frank Kimball says the road may be finished by 1976.

"We've just completed the centre line for the first 50-mile section from Fort Simpson to Camsell Bend," he said.

Survey crews, working out of a 50-man department of public works camp near Fort Simpson, are doing design work following the centre-line bulldozers. Soil testing and a search for gravel pits is also under way.

The right-of-way is being cleared by hand under an arrangement with the Northwest Territories government, which is hiring natives for the work.

Mr. Kimball said the first 50 miles of the highway will go along the west side of the Mackenzie River and the next 50 will be on the east side.

Over the entire 670-mile highway route there will be three crossings of the Mackenzie, he said, one at Camsell Bend, another at Great Bear River and the third where the Dempster and Mackenzie highways are scheduled to meet at Arctic Red River.

BRIDGES EXPENSIVE

The three crossings will be covered by ferries, at least for the first few years, and the government is testing the possibility of using an air-cushion vehicle to provide ferry service. Ice bridges would replace the ferries in the winter.

Mr. Kimball said the decision to use ferries was made because "there is one hell of a pile of money to be put into bridges."

He said contracts for gravel surfacing of the highway will not be called until 1975. "You've got to build the subgrade first."

Public works crews this winter will cover the area from Camsell Bend to Fort Good Hope—and the centre line to Good Hope should be finished by February.

Meanwhile, the territorial government and department of Indian affairs were studying the possibility of establishing campsites along the way and certain areas may have to be preserved for such use.

Mr. Kimball said a final decision has yet to be made on exactly where the highway will go north of Fort Good Hope, a decision that will depend to some extent on the route a proposed natural gas pipeline takes from Alaska and the Mackenzie delta.

WENT THROUGH MILL

After a couple of months on the job Mr. Kimball, a native of New Brunswick, said he's had some harder jobs, including his last one as design manager for a $20-million oil terminal wharf at Come-By-Chance, Nfld.

He also worked as regional highways engineer for the Atlantic provinces when the Trans-Canada Highway was being built at a $50-million-a-year clip and has had national parks construction experience.

He's been in the business for about 18 years, starting with the New Brunswick highways department as a chainman. "I've been through the whole mill—chainman, rodman, survey, resident engineer, construction engineer."

2 New Roman Gods Come Back to Life

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Two previously unknown Roman gods—perhaps the centre of a fertility cult—have been discovered by an archeology expedition in western Turkey, a Harvard University professor said.

A stone inscription describing the gods was found with a seventh-century lime kiln which may have been used to melt the gods' statues, he said.

The gods, named Abundance and Growth, are believed to be children of the Roman corn goddess.

The director of the joint Harvard-Cornell University expedition, Harvard professor George Hanfmann, theorized that a fertility cult existed around the worship of these deities.

"It is presumed the cult was built around food," Hanfmann said in an interview. "These were not bloody gods and there were no animal sacrifices. The gods were probably offered the first fruits of harvest—vegetables, corn and other grain—in a ceremony sort of like our Thanksgiving."

The find was made this summer in a gymnasium at Sardis, a city destroyed by the Persians in the seventh century. The site has been under excavation since 1958.

The inscription said the statues of the gods had been given to the city's gymnasium by a wealthy Roman in the third century AD to insure the prosperity of the city and the suburbs of Sardis.

Hanfmann said archaeologists found the lime kiln within a few feet of the statue base. He theorized that statues of the gods and other figures in the gymnasium hall probably were melted down.

TOURISTS BEEF ABOUT PRICES

HAMILTON, Bermuda (Reuter) — Tourists' complaints about high prices are causing concern in this little British colony.

The island's only daily newspaper, The Royal Gazette warned that the island resort must change its millionaire playground image and begin catering to middle-class package tour visitors if it is to survive against fierce overseas competition.

News stories featuring complaints from visitors about prices brought charges of "hysterical journalism" from government spokesmen.

The department of tourism issued hitherto confidential statistical evidence showing that 91 per cent of all visitors in 1971 considered Bermuda the best possible place for a vacation.

Three per cent were dissatisfied, but of these only one per cent blamed high costs.

So far in 1972, the survey showed that of 169 foreign visitors questioned at random, only 13 complained of the cost of accommodation, one about the high cost of restaurant meals, and two about the prices in the shops.

CZECH SKIING IS GREAT . . .

. . . as these snow-covered peaks in the Giant Mountains, about 150 miles from Prague in Northern Bohemia show. This is the country the carol was written about — where the snow comes early an lies deep and crisp and even until late spring . . . and the resorts with the tongue-twisting names are becoming reasonably-priced playgrounds for Canadian snowbunnies more and more each year. Even including air fare, Czech slopes are almost as cheap to ski as Canadian ones — and for novices, there are lessons available at an even buck each.

It Means Trouble In Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (AP) — For six centuries, the stone spire atop the hill that gave this Cambodian city its name has towered over Phnom Penh. Now its needle-like tip is missing and a long fissure runs down to its base.

To the citizens, this can mean only one thing—disaster.

The spire was hit by lightning during a recent thunderstorm. It was the second incident involving destruction of a national symbol in the last two months.

On Oct. 9, second anniversary of this former kingdom's declaration of itself as a republic, a madman lopped off the head of the statue of the leper king.

The statue, outside the wall of the Unnalom Pagoda on the bank of the Tonle Sap River, had a special meaning to Cambodians. During the Second World War, residents sought shelter under its base from the bombs of American airplanes.

It is said that no one was ever injured during the bombardments while he was under the leper king's protection.

The vandalism had come two days after a bloody Communist sapper attack on the city, and the government moved swiftly to repair the damage. Workmen quickly glued the head back on and repainted the statue its bizarre yellow.

It will take longer to repair the spire of Phnom Penh—the Hill of Lady Penh. Meanwhile, Cambodians flock to the knoll and give their war-jangled nerves another jolt.

Safety Accessories

DUNCAN — The perfect Christmas gift for children is safety accessories for their bikes, says Staff-Sgt. Herbert Knopf, head of the Duncan RCMP detachment.

Knopf said that on Halloween he sent two children home pushing their bikes after he ticed they had no lights on their fairly new bicycles.

He said he would rather do this than have the risk of the children being hit by a car.

It's a Rather Vague Definition

GARDENING
jack beastall

The role of perennials in the modern garden is our subject for today. But first we should agree on what constitutes a perennial.

The term is rather vague considering that it can apply to any plant persisting over two or more growing seasons. If we accept this definition, all our trees, shrubs and lawn grasses are perennials.

This leaves us with a group of plants which although they persist for many years, do not have any growth showing above ground over winter nor a life span comparable to either a tree or a shrub.

To differentiate, we call these plants herbaceous perennials because the growth is soft like an herb rather than woody like a tree.

Herbaceous perennials came into prominence during the Victorian era, massed in long beds familiar to us as herbaceous borders.

Rules required that the plants be low in front gradating to tall at the back, well mixed as to types and varieties so that some flowers were evident over the entire border from early spring to late fall.

During winter there was nothing to see but an occasional shrub, sometimes evergreen, more often deciduous with berries for a little color.

The labor involved in maintaining such a border was fantastic, but those were days when a head gardener, two under-gardeners and four apprentices worked from sunrise to sunset, six days a week for a total wage of a few dollars.

All the plants had to be lifted, dvided, and replanted at least once in every three to five years in order to have the masses of flowers for which the borders were famous.

The summer flowering plants were handled in spring followed by fall plants in early summer, and the early spring plants in late summer.

This meant working on the border every month during the growing season and planning the work so that the over-all effect was not disrupted.

Today we live in a different age. Few homeowners can afford even one permanent gardener, and none of us has the time to spare for a perennial border.

WHAT CONSTITUTES A PERENNIAL . . .??

Therefore herbaceous perennials, although still the plants introduced before Queen Victoria's time, are looked at with a different idea in mind. They are considered as accent plants to be used in groups to produce a definite effect, rather than plants to be mixed and massed for color effect alone.

Consideration is given more to the habit of the plant, its foliage and its outline, rather than solely to its time of flowering and color of bloom.

Another important point is ease of handling, preference being given to those plants which need the minimum of attention in the way of replenishing by division, cutting down or trimming, and removal of spent blooms.

The home gardener interested in herbaceous perennials is not limited by an dearth of material. A few years back I was growing 250 kinds and varieties, more than enough to fill an acreage using but one representative of each.

Blooming time started with the Hellebores in January, ending with the last flowering Hardy Aster in the fall, but not all could be considered easy to handle.

The Hardy Aster, for example, and the Phlox, need a few new plants from cuttings or outside divisions every year if they are to produce quantities of large blooms. Both deteriorate rapidly as the rootstocks become woody.

Compared with these, we have the paeonies which resent frequent disturbance. Once properly planted, they have been known to thrive for more than 50 years, a real easy-to-care-for plant.

The perennial Iberis (Candytuft) is knwon to most gardeners for its chalky whiteness. It improves each year, as does Bergenia cordifolia with large evergreen leaves and heads of pink flowers in earliest spring. The latter is found in most gardens but few know its name.

Tall and graceful is Thalictrum aquilegifolium, quite a contrast to Baptisia australis which has a bushy habit, a mass of attractive foliage and heads of blue pea-flowers.

Artemisia lactiflora is another four-footer, its milk-white almond-scented flowers seldom enjoyed in gardens today.

The many cultivars of Hemerocallis (Daylily) could well fill a large garden, flowering in succession from May to October. Seldom do they need lifting and replanting, and the modern introductions provide colors to fit any need. Some open from sunrise to sunset while others open late afternoon and fade the next day.

Kniphofia, the Red-hot poker, has great architectural value, and the same can be said of Physostegia virginia.

For foliage design nothing beats the Hostas (plantain-lily), and they do well in partial shade.

Leaves vary from plain bright green through gold-streaked to large blue-green, some beautifully waved. These are highly prized by flower arrangers. Hostas are lovely in partial shaded areas.

Astilbes can accompany them, contrasting their finer foliage and colors of red and pink in several shades, and pure white.

Aruncus sylvestre is another shade-lover of larger proportions. Goats-beard is its common name.

Tall and graceful for fall is Anemone hupehense, while Pulmonaria (Lungwort) is low, adding its color to the spring garden, following the golden daisy-like flowers of the dwarf forms of Doronicum (Leopard's-bane).

In the above list we have a small selection of useful herbaceous perennials that can be used among shrubs to create points of interest and contrast. All are ideal for the modern garden because of the minimum care required.

The one secret of their use is to plant in bold groups of one kind and color. Mixing several kinds or colors in a group will never give the effect, or the satisfaction, you are seeking.

WEEK'S WORK

Slug damage to crowns of herbaceous plants, like lupins, delphiniums and others showing young growth in mild spells, can be lessened by ringing them with sharp sand or small charcoal pieces from wood fibres.

Cut off dead outdoor fern fronds so long as plenty remain to protect the crowns during winter frosts. New ferns can be planted now to beautify a shaded patio corner.

Helleborus niger (Christmas-rose) needs glass protection against splashing on blossoms. A bottomless wooden box of suitable depth with sheet of glass over top will suffice. Weight with rock to prevent it taking off in wind.

Pots of freesia corms started in August can now come from the coldframe where they rooted and grew up a few inches. Put into a cool, airy, sunny greenhouse or room. Flowers are good only if given these conditions.

A glass-roofed room adjoining the home is made beautiful by growing early-flowering outdoor shrubs in large tubs.

Automation Hits Docks in Nfld.

By JAMES HUSSEY
Canadian Press Correspondent

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — With increased population and more buying power since Confederation in 1949, more goods are being landed each year in this port city, the chief distribution centre for Newfoundland.

But there is less work for local stevedores who are losing out to automation.

Frank Andrews, president of the Longshoremen's Protective Union, says 10 years ago the union had 1,500 active members. Now there are less than 300 and the decline continues.

Seven years ago, the introduction of sideloading freighters to haul cargo from Montreal and other points meant the laying off of many men and became the chief issue of the most stubborn strike to hit the St. John's docks for many years.

Since then automation has been making inroads into the labor force. Earlier in 1972, the second roll-on, roll-off ferry servi[illegible] transporting new motor [illegible]icles from the Canadian mainland was introduced.

"In addition to the active membership of the Longshoremen's Protective Union there are about 500 retired members," said Mr. Andrews.

When the salt fish industry was in its heyday hundreds of vessels landed their catches here for shipment overseas and about 3,000 waterfront workers were employed.

Since Confederation, the federal government has built substantial piers and breakwaters in many small outports, where fresh fish processing plants are located. The new piers enable modern, refrigerated ships to call at these ports and load cargo directly from holding depots.

The island's increasing network of roads is also playing a big part in today's distribution. Canadian National can drop off carload lots of goods at points along the railway line and merchants can take delivery in their own trucks.

Captain N. A. Baird, manager of Newfoundland Steamships Ltd., operating two sideloaders between Montreal and St. John's, said "the past summer was a busy period and extra workers had to be taken on."

Greater Victoria's School Trustees:
How Should They Be Elected?
Information for the guidance of electors
In Greater Victoria School District (No. 61)

During the municipal elections Dec. 9 you will be invited to vote in an opinion poll on the method of electing school trustees in this School District.

Until two years ago, the nine trustees of the Greater Victoria School Board were elected from the municipalities which make up the District. Victoria had three representatives, urban Saanich had three, Oak Bay had two and Esquimalt had one. The unorganized district of View Royal was represented by Victoria trustees. View Royal voted on the Victoria slate of candidates.

After study of the matter in 1969 and 1970, the Board obtained permission from the Minister of Education to change to election-at-large. Since then there has been a single slate of trustee candidates throughout the School District at election time. There are no trustee quotas by ward. Each trustee represents all electors.

After two years' experience under the system, the Greater Victoria School Board now seeks the opinion of the public. Which system of election do you favor? Results of the poll will not be binding on the Board, because any change is the prerogative of the Minister of Education.

This is a replica of the ballot which you will be invited to mark:

THE BOARD OF SCHOOL TRUSTEES OF SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 61 (GREATER VICTORIA)
OPINION POLL (Specimen Only)

The results of this Opinion Poll will be for the information of the Board and will not be legally binding on the Board.

Which one of the two following systems of electing School Trustees do you prefer?

ELECTION AT LARGE (Each Trustee elected from entire School District as at present.) ☐
ELECTION FROM WARDS (Each Trustee elected from a specific Municipality or a specific area.) ☐

Place X in ONE blank square only—opposite the system you prefer.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: When a parakeet is crazy about something like pumpkin pie, is it all right to give him a little? I scrape off the whipped cream first so he doesn't get too fat. — T.N.

DEAR T.N.: A petite portion of pumpkin pie shouldn't harm your bird. The main problem in allowing the bird to indulge in a variety of goodies is that he may soon seek them out not only for desert but for a major portion of his diet. The usual result of such a "well rounded" diet is a well rounded waistline produced by foods high in calories and comparatively low in everything else. Admittedly, it is fun to see your bird try out foods and have new experiences, but it is far better if these new foods which are high in protein or other valuable ingredients.

DEAR DR. MILLER: What does "wet tail" do to hamsters? — V.T.

DEAR V.T.: Very frequently, it kills them. The severe diarrhea involved with this infection is usually due to bacterial organisms ranging from the common E. coili to salmonella. Whether a hamster who has it can be saved depends on the organism involved, the condition of the animal, and the vigor with which the treatment is carried out.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Ebony is a black Siamese. Her mother has the dark brown ears and is called, I am told, a chocolate point. She has a long tail too, but not nearly as long as Ebony's. I have been told this long tail is an indication of the length of the pedigree. How does this tie in?—J.J.

DEAR J.J.: Pedigreed black Siamese are decidedly rare, a prolonged posterior appendage notwithstanding. Not that there is any tie-in between tail length and pedigree length, anyway. While Ebony's mother may well be a chocolate point Siamese. I'd suspect that the father is something else. Such Siamese matings with anonymous partners often result in black offspring.

Smuggler Takes U.S. Jail To Escape Guillotine

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Christian David, a 41-year-old Frenchman said to head one of the world's largest international heroin-smuggling rings, has chosen jail in the United States rather than the possibility of the guillotine in France. He was sentenced Friday to 20 years in prison on a U.S. narcotics charge.

David—convicted in absentia in France for the Feb. 2, 1966, murder of a French police commissioner—pleaded guilty in federal court to an indictment charging him with conspiring to smuggle more than 1,000 pounds of heroin, valued at $250 million, into the United States between January, 1968, and April, 1971.

The French police official was killed while investigating the disappearance of Moroccan opposition leader Mehdi Ben Barka. David, known by the nickname of "Le Beau Serge", was suspected of being involved in Ben Barka's disappearance.

In passing sentence, Judge Jacob Mishler stipulated that David not be considered for parole during his imprisonment and said he viewed David's plea of guilty "as a device to give Mr. David a prison term so as to frustrate the French government's efforts to extradite and execute him."

ARRESTED IN BRAZIL

David, a resident of Sao Paulo, Brazil, and another reputed narcotics smuggling bigwig, Michael Nicoli of France, were arrested by Brazilian authorities early last November at the request of the U.S. government.

Narcotics and customs agents had been following the activities of David's drug-smuggling ring in New York, Washington, Miami, Europe and South America for about five years. Their investigation came to a head with the cooperation of a number of co-conspirators in the ring.

Teller's $1,000 Mistake Was Not a Windfall

EDMONTON — A man has pleaded guilty to theft of $1,000 after a bank teller accidentally gave him too much money and he refused to return the windfall.

Terrance Findley, 23, of Hinton, Alta., withdrew $1,500 from his account but the teller gave him $2,500. Bank officials traced the shortage, went to Findley's home and called police when he refused to return the money.

Some $520 was recovered by police but the rest is still missing.

LOS ANGELES — To bring back the golden age of radio and at the same time re-enact a wedding broadcast on the station 50 years ago, a radio station recently held a contest for a couple to be married on the air.

The winning couple was to have been driven to the Ambassador Hotel in a vintage Packard Super 8 sedan for a one-week honeymoon.

The winners of the contest, who sent in the best explanation of why they would like to be married on the air, were John Hurson, a part-time yacht captain, and Sondra Scott, a part-time teacher.

But the station, KFI, reluctantly called off the ceremony which was to have been broadcast live at midnight today. A spokesman said the groom skipped town and can't be found.

KAMPALA — President Idi Amin of Uganda says he is so happy Chad broke off diplomatic relations with Israel that he would like to carry President Francois Tombalbaye on his back.

Amin sent a message to Tombalbaye saying: "When we are on good terms with our visitors, it often happens that we carry them on our backs. My happiness at your visit would be so great that I would like to carry you on my back."

DETROIT — Carl Haessler, 84, a unionist and scholar who helped develop unionism in the United States, died Friday.

An old-line socialist — described by a friend as a "gentle anarchist" — he helped organize the American Newspaper Guild and founded and edited the United Auto Workers first labor newspaper.

Policemen Taken By Sob Story

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (UPI) — A couple who told a sad tale of being broke and out of gas while driving their 8-month-old daughter to San Francisco for brain surgery apparently took police for $41, officers said today.

An old battered car puttered up to the police station Thursday evening. The family belongings were tied to the top and the gas gauge read "empty."

A man who identified himself as Valgene Banes, 34, of Hobbs, N.M., and his wife Peg, 24, told officers they only had 24 cents and an 8-month-old daughter who had a blood clot on her brain.

They said they were driving to San Francisco for an operation for the girl.

"Our hearts went out to them," said Capt. Ted Morton. "We passed around the hat and every officer gave money." The 20 men on duty emptied their pockets and gave a total of $41.

As offers of public assistance began pouring into the station Friday, Sgt. Walter Kainz was ordered to make a check of Banes.

He discovered:

—Banes had records in New Mexico, Nevada, Texas and San Francisco for arrests ranging from vagrancy, robbery and suspicion of being a peeping tom.

—There was no hospital in San Francisco with a record of the stricken child or the Banes.

—The "brain surgeon" whose name Banes had given police was not listed in San Francisco medical directories.

"It's beginning to look like we've been had and that the night watch was flimflammed," said Lt. Cliff Hodge.

Organic Food Test Finds Lots of DDT

NEW YORK (CP) — Some organically-grown foods are overpriced, lacking in the nutritional values they claim to offer and show a higher rate of pesticide residues than regular foods, testimony from professional nutritionists says.

The health-food critics spoke Friday at a consumer hearing conducted by Attorney-General Louis J. Lefkowitz of New York state to clarify some of the confusion he says "reigns supreme" in the organic-food field.

Pro-organic-food witnesses asked that the entire industry not be faulted for a few "rip-offs," adding that new self-policing programs are being developed.

Dr. Elmer George, director of the state food laboratory, said 30 per cent of 55 organic-food samples tested contained "pesticide residues," whereas 20 per cent of 2,000 normal-food samples showed pesticide traces.

Although there is no single accepted definition of what organic food is, such food is assumed to be grown without pesticides or artificial fertilizer and to contain no additives.

George said 17 organic products — although labelled with such claims as unsprayed, organically grown and no chemical residues — were found to have traces of DDT-DDE, a derivative of DDT; phosphorus, and chlorinated pesticides.

Dr. William Sebrell, former director of the National Institutes of Health, said he knew of "no acceptable medical benefits or nutritional advantages" to health foods. But, he said, he knew of no disadvantages and concluded: "Anyone who wants to waste their money should be free to do so."

Jets Relax Astronauts

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 17 astronauts take to the air for proficiency runs in jet planes today at legal manoeuvring continues in efforts to avert a threatened strike that could delay their launch to the moon Wednesday night.

Eugene Cernan, geologist Harrison Schmitt and Ronald Evans planned to drive to nearby Patrick Air Force Base in the afternoon to fly the fast T-38 jets in proficiency runs over south Florida.

The astronauts feel such flights not only sharpen their flying skills but also provide relaxation from rigorous training for the flight, the last in the Apollo series.

Posties Walk Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Some Vancouver residents missed regular mail deliveries Friday as a result of a two-hour work stoppage by graveyard shift workers at the main post office.

Workers walked off the job at 4:30 a.m. in protest against some local working conditions and prolonged national contract negotiations.

A statement issued by Post Office officials at 8 a.m., 90 minutes after work had resumed, said "the situation now is normal," adding:

"As a result of this action, there will be limited mails available for delivery today. The issues that led to the work stoppage are not clear at this time."

Weddings

Horne — Vivian

A lovely double-ring ceremony was solemnized November 3, 1972, at 7:30 p.m. in St. Luke's Anglican Church, when Holly Elice, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Vivian, 1438 Wende Road, exchanged vows with David Patrick Horne, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Horne. The Venerable C. Wolff officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a floor-length slightly entrain white crepe gown, empire waist, high collar and full long-cuffed sleeves, trimmed with French eyelet lace. Her matching headpiece held a three-tiered finger-tip veil. Holly carried three red roses on a white Bible. Matron of honor, Mrs. Wende Hinkelman, sister of the bride, wore a deep-pink chiffon gown. Bridesmatron Mrs. Kathy Nelson, wore a matching gown of deep peacock blue. Both carried bouquets of white mums. The best man was Mr. Stan Nelson. Mr. Ray Vaast and Mr. Arthur Horne ushered the guests.

The reception was held at the Gordon Head Recreation Centre, where Mr. Russell Dempster proposed the toast to the bride. Mr. Ronald Gardier was master of ceremonies. For her going away outfit, the bride chose a taupe Italian knit matching ensemble with black accessories. Her corsage was of white mums. On their return from a honeymoon up-island, the happy couple will make their home at 2084 Milton Street, Victoria.

Currie — Oldfield

The marriage is announced of Gay Charmaine, only daughter of Mrs. R. C. Oldfield of 4674 Pipeline Road, Victoria, and the late Mr. Oldfield, to Mr. Brian Joseph Currie, elder son of Major and Mrs. D. J. Currie of 954 Brighton Crescent, Victoria, on November 24, 1972.

The are residing in New Westminster, B.C.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to express our deepest and heartfelt thanks to all our neighbours and friends for their kind expressions of sympathy, cards and flowers during the loss of my husband and our father, John Zupanc. Special thanks to all those who offered comfort to my children while I was in Yugoslavia, to all those who sent flowers to Yugoslavia and to the Reverend D. F. Johnston for the lovely memorial service.
Mrs. Elizabeth Zupanc and Family.

We wish to thank our many friends and neighbours for their kind donations to George Peakes Clinic, also, Mr. and Mrs. Sands. Special thanks to Esquimalt Police Force and Canadian Armed Forces for their help in the search of our son, Ernie Whitcomb and family.

Mrs. Violet Cubbon and family wish to thank all their kind friends who sent flowers, cards and expressions of sympathy in their recent sad bereavement at the loss of a beloved husband and father.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BACK—In loving memory of my dear friend Kay, who passed away Dec. 2, 1971.
Her memory is as dear today
As in the hour she passed away.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by her pal Joan (Jo).

McWHIRTER—In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, John McWhirter, who passed away December 2, 1963.
"His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away."
—Remembered and always loved by his wife Mary and all the Family.

TOWERS — Isabella Wood.
Loving and kind in all her ways
Upright and just, to the end of her days
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind
Beautiful memories, she left behind.
—Very sadly missed, Dad, Betty and Ken.

DOWN and OUT
It means what it says! The "down" payment is small enough and you'll hardly miss it—we're banking on the part that they'll go "out" one after another by the score. We operate on the policy that volume sales turnover is the way to keep everyone happy—with "Honda"

H — O — N — D — A
We've got all the models, row upon row of them and all the sparkling colors that Honda is famous for. If you shouldn't see what you want at 1st glance—ask a "Honda Helper", it's probably at the bottom of crate upon crate in the corner of our vast Warehouse Showroom!

Arsenal Grabs Second Place

LONDON (CP) — League-leading Liverpool came from behind to grab a 4-3 victory over Birmingham today and strengthen its position at the top of English soccer's First Division.

In another critical game between two championship contenders, Arsenal beat Leeds 2-1 and moved into second place.

Liverpool, with 30 points leads by three. Arsenal is next with 27 points and Leeds third with 26.

In a pulsating match before more than 45,000 fans, Liverpool was behind 3-1 at one stage.

In the 13th minute, Gordon Taylor scored for the visitors. Three minutes later Birmingham's Bobby Hope slid in an easy second goal.

Then Alec Lindsay got one back for Liverpool with a well-placed free kick from just outside the penalty area. Birmingham went two up again when Bob Latchford scored in the 43rd minute.

Liverpool's great recovery started just before half time when Peter Cormack booted home a Kevin Keegan pass.

In the second half, Lindsay scored his second goal and an 18-yard drive by John Toshack wrapped up the victory in the 77th minute.

Hughes Attempts to Hush Stories of His Fears

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Howard Hughes spent millions of dollars allaying strange fears, including buying a hotel to keep a sign from falling on him and cancelling a golf touranment for fear of floating germs, according to court documents that attorneys for Hughes tried to hush up.

The claims were in depositions from Robert Maheu, once Hughes' chief lieutenant in Nevada: The two men have been feuding since Hughes fired Maheu.

Maheu filed a suit against Hughes in U.S. district court here, charging him with libel and slander and asking $17.5 million in damages.

The suit is in reply to a remark by Hughes in the much-publicized telephone news conference during the Clifford Irving phoney autobiography affair. A voice identified by reporters as that of Hughes said Maheu "stole me blind."

Maheu sued Hughes, Hughes Tool Co. and the public relations agency that represents Hughes and set up the news conference.

Attorneys for the defence demanded that Maheu file written statements giving details of every deal involving more than $1,000 in which he represented Hughes.

The statements were filed in federal court, whereupon attorneys for Hughes demanded the judge have them sealed, removed from the publicly-available court record, because they contained "scandalous and slanderous information." Judge Harry Pregerson, citing the first amendement guarantees of free speech, refused.

One of the statements by Maheu said that Hughes bought the Frontier Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas because he was afraid of its sign.

Hughes was living in the penthouse of the Desert Inn, across the street at the time, Maheu said. When Hughes noticed the 189-foot high sign just erected at a cost of $1 million in front of the opposite hotel "He was afriad that the sign would collapse and endanger his life by falling on the penthouse," so Maheu was asked to talk to the owners of the Frontier about removing it, he said.

"When he was informed that the owners had no desire to tear down the sign . . . and that if the sign would collapse there was no way in which it could cause damage to the Desert Inn, he insisted I proceed forthwith in an attempt to buy the hotel".

The sign is still there, however. Maheu gave no explanation in the court documents of why Hughes didn't tear it down after allegedly buying the whole hotel for that purpose.

Acupuncture Bills Legitimate Claim

CHICAGO (AP) — Two major insurance subsidiaries of CNA Financial Corp. have announced they are prepared to pay claims for legitimate acupuncture treatments.

Officials of Continental Assurance Co. and Continental Casualty Co. said Friday that coverage would apply only to "those procedures done by a licensed practitioner as a specific medical procedure."

Acupuncture is the ancient Chinese practice of inserting long, thin needles into certain points of the body to ease or stop pain.

"We have no intention of paying claims for 'back-alley' acupuncture treatments," said Herbert C. Parsons, vice-president of Continental Casualty.

"Right now, for example, Weiss Memorial Hospital in Chicago is using acupuncture experimentally as an anesthetic procedure," he told reporters. "We would pay the regular anesthetic fee on that."

He said no claims for acupuncture have been received.

Truman Was Target Of '47 Mail Bombs

NEW YORK (AP) — The White House mail room in 1947 intercepted several letter-bombs sent by Zionist terrorists known as the Stern Gang to President Harry Truman and his staff, the former president's daughter has written in a new biography of Truman.

The incident was described in another book in 1949 by Ira R. T. Smith, a White House mail reader. But Margaret Truman Daniel's account, contained in her new book Harry S. Truman, is believed to be the first confirmation by someone in Truman's circle.

In quotations from the book published in today's edition of the New York Times, Mrs. Daniel writes that "a number of cream-colored envelopes" arrived at the White House addressed to the president and various staff members.

They contained envelopes inside marked "Private and Confidential" and, inside these, were potentially lethal devices made of "powdered gelignite, a pencil battery and a detonator rigged to explode the gelignite when the envelope was opened," says the book.

Mrs. Daniel says the letters were intercepted and given to the Secret Service, which defused them, because similar letters had been mailed to British officials.

Mrs. Daniel does not say why the letters were attributed to the Stern Gang, which was named for Abraham Stern, a militant Zionist killed by the British in 1942.

Oak Bay Ponders Candidates

The Oak Bay Recreation Action Group will decide Sunday night which of the aldermanic candidates for the Dec. 9 election they will endorse.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the senior citizens' centre on Monterey.

Spokesman J.D. Sambrooke, said today that he's hoping that every resident interested in getting an ice rink and swimming pool will attend.

"We will examine the past voting records of the incumbents and the platforms of the new people running for office," he said.

Sambrooke is campaign chairman for Neil Rawlings, a B.C. Telephone supervisor, who has worked for the group and lists a recreation complex as his top priority.

Kerr Heads Health Group

Dr. Andrew Kerr, chief psychologist at the Victoria Mental Health Centre, has been elected president of the B.C. Psychological Association.

Consultant at the Victoria centre, Frank Spellacy, was elected a director of association.

SIDELIGHTS ON SKOPJE

The massacre at the Olympics in Munich cast a shadow all the way to the Chess Olympics in Skopje, Yugoslavia. Police and detectives were everywhere, constantly checking identity cards of players, officials and the press. The hotel housing the Israeli team was a near fort. When, in all innocence, I tried to get in a side door, I was pounced upon by two plainclothesmen who had been watching me from a car parked nearby. It took all my powers of persuasion to convince them that I was a harmless, middle-aged chess official from the United States.

★ ★ ★

The most comfortable and colorful of the three big halls in which the Olympics were held was "C," where the women's world team championship was held. The Japanese ladies were models of beauty and calm but were not superlative chess players.

★ ★ ★

A strange thing happened in the U.S.S.R.-Bulgaria match. At adjournment time, Bulgaria's Tringov sealed his move after 40 moves had been made against Korchnoi. The next morning at 9, when the games were continued, the sealed envelope was opened — and found to contain nothing. FIDE rules state that if a sealed move is badly written, the game is lost. And nothing in the sealed envelope spells the same thing. Yet, Tringov swore that he had written his move on the paper given to him, put it in the envelope and sealed it, and had given it to the tournament director at his table. To no avail. Korchnoi got the point, although it would have ended in an easy draw had the game been continued. But where did the move go?

Street Violence Becomes Part Of London Life

LONDON (AP) — Muggers, including gangs of teen-age girls armed with switchblade knives, are undermining London's reputation as a city with safe streets. Police are trying to keep the crime from taking firm root in Britain.

Two years ago an American resident reported to police the mugging of his 12-year-old son in fashionable Kensington Gardens. The embarrassed police told the father: "Oh, this doesn't happen here."

It is happening, with sufficient frequency to prompt John Hill, taking over soon as Britain's top policeman, to promise highest priority for a campaign against street violence.

"We don't want a New York type situation in this country," said Hill, currently a deputy commissioner at Scotland Yard.

Cases in recent weeks which have aroused public concern include: a 79-year-old church verger battered to death for the equivalent of a quarter; a young woman raped and her date beaten; a teacher in her 20s attacked and robbed by three teen-aged girls.

Judges have reacted by imposing sentences on defendants who might ordinarily have expected to escape with a fine or a period of probation. Handing out three-year terms to three youths who beat up a man for $1.20, a judge said: "I am sorry to say that although the course I feel bound to take may not be the best for you young men individually, it is one I feel driven to take in the public interest."

BRRR! IT COULD HAPPEN HERE . . .

Victoria may be in for its first snowfall this weekend. A cold air front, which has already brought inches of snow to the interior of the province, is heading for the city.

If it reaches here this evening we'll probably have mixed rain and snow, if it comes in the early hours Sunday morning Victorians may wake up to snow.

A new cold record was set this morning as the mercury at the airport dipped to 26 degrees, one degree lower than the old record set on Dec. 2, 1954.

Snow also hit parts of eastern Canada Friday. Nearly three inches fell in Montreal and even this snowy statue of Sir Wilfrid Laurier (right) in a downtown park there seems to shiver with cold.

Australia Voters Go Labor

CANBERRA (CP) — The Labor party was swept to power in the Australian general election today, ending the 23-year-old government of the Liberal-County party coalition.

Prime Minister William McMahon conceded defeat to the Labor party led by Gough Whitlam.

In Sydney, a sniper armed with an air rifled opened fire outside a suburban polling booth and hit four persons, including the daughter of the speaker of the House of Representatives.

Police said about 12 shots were fired but no one was seriously hurt.

Margaret Aston, 21-year-old daughter of Speaker Sir William Aston, and two other women were hit in the legs by air gun pellets. A man was hit in the ear.

At his party headquarters, Whitlam, 56, hugged his wife Margaret and shouted to 300 supporters: "It was time."

Labor's campaign was pegged to the slogan, "It's Time" for a change.

With 27 seats undecided, computers gave the Labor party the necessary 63 seats to form a government in the 125-seat House of Representatives.

In the outgoing House, the coalition held 66 seats to Labor's 59.

In the shattering rebuff by Australia's seven million voters to his coalition, McMahon, prime minister for only 20 months, was himself in danger of losing his seat in the Sydney district of Lowe to Labor's Bill Fisher.

At least five other government ministers were trailing their Labor opponents and another, Navy Minister Malcolm McKay, has conceded defeat.

If McMahon is defeated he will be the second Australian prime minister to lose his seat in an election.

NEWS BRIEFS

Sell-Off Trims Canadian Dollar

TORONTO (CP) — The floating Canadian dollar levelled off Friday at near par with the U.S. dollar after a fairly heavy sell-off Thursday. It settled at about 100.50 cents U.S., down from 101.25 a week earlier. One Toronto money market dealer said the latest burst in dollar trading is "perhaps the most hectic I've ever seen."

21 Die at Sea

JAKARTA (AP) — Twenty-one persons were killed, 80 were missing and 186 were injured seriously after two ships collided in bad weather off the Celebes in the Java Sea last week, reports reaching here today said.

Final Briefing

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon and his top security adviser, Henry Kissinger, held "extensive consultations" today prior to Kissinger's Sunday departure to resume Vietnam peace talks in Paris.

Gales Lash U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Gales and torrential rain lashed southrn England today, flooding towns and villages and endangering ships around the coasts. Southwestern England bore the brunt of the storm. The villages of East Budleigh and Sidmouth in Devon were evacuated and families used boats to move from flooded homes in Midsomer Norton, near the port of Bristol, when the River Somer burst its banks.

Arab Talks Invaded

PARIS (Reuter) — A dozen masked and armed youths burst into an internatonal pro-Arab conference here today, smashed equipment and injured delegates. The youths, who yelled "Israel will win," carried wooden clubs, iron bars and broken bottles, eyewitnesses said.

Millions Vowed To Make Jobs

REGINA (CP) — A job-making program costing more than a third of a billion dollars was heralded Friday by Prime Minister Trudeau with other measures in a speech combining apologies for past omissions and determination to do better.

"Judge us by our actions in the coming weeks and months," Trudeau told a Saskatchewan Liberal Association dinner audience billed as numbering more than 1,500.

Trudeau said there were justified complaints about freeloading on the welfare system. Some measures to tighten the unemployment insurance scheme had been announced and there would be more.

The government in its new system installed Jan. 1 probably acted too quickly in its desire to make the Canadian system the best in the world, particularly for workers facing changing technology.

"We will not betray the Liberal idea of social justice but it will not be destroyed by abuse," Trudeau said.

The regional economic expansion program had been criticized and there had been mistakes in application by a new department spending $900 million for development of poorer areas.

"We don't apologize for the idea," Trudau said. "We do admit some mistakes." New policies and programs would be presented to Parliament when it opens Jan. 4. But it was a matter of regret that programs to aid poorer areas had been attacked "for reasons which would make Canadians ashamed."

The government should have done more during the election campaign to offset widespread attacks on the system, particularly references to Quebec getting the lion's share. Figures showed that the department of regional economic expansion on a per-capita basis from its inception in 1969 through 1972 had paid Newfoundland $249, Prince Edward Island $389, Nova Scotia $141, New Brunswick $218, Manitoba $51 and Saskatchewan $55, compared to only $36 for Quebec.

There had also been indignation expressed about laxity in administering the immigration policy, said Trudeau, and without resorting to discrimination based on color, creed or race further steps would be announced shortly to tighten the regulations.

Devastation marks heart of Dublin

Bombs Push Dublin Into Anti-IRA Law

Times News Services

DUBLIN — Two bombs exploded in the heart of Dublin Friday night, killing two persons, wounding 50 and abruptly ending the political crisis that had threatened Premier Jack Lynch's government.

The bombs, both left in cars, went off within 20 minutes of each other near O'Connell Street, the capital's main artery. The first exploded outside Liberty Hall, a popular meeting place on a bank of the Liffey, and accounted for one of the deaths. The other blew up in Sackville Street behind a department store and killed a man in a nearby office.

The explosions, less than 200 yards apart, shattered buildings and showered passersby with glass and brick. Some of the 50 injured were reported to be in serious condition.

The car bombs exploded at the very moment that the Dail, the Irish parliament, was winding up a tense debate on a Lynch bill to give the government sweeping powers against the Irish Republican Army.

The measure had been bitterly fought as "repressive" by the two opposition parties and they had counted enough votes to defeat it. If they had been right, Lynch would have dissolved the parliament and called for a general election.

But the bombs changed all that. Just before 10 p.m., about 90 minutes after the second explosion, Deputy Patrick Cooney, a leader of the opposition Fine Gael Party, rose to his feet in the packed and hushed chamber.

Cooney deplored "the tragic event which has overtaken parliament." If the opposition persisted, he said, "it might have the effect of plunging the country into a political crisis . . . more turmoil."

So, he said, Fine Gael was withdrawing its amendment to kill the meauure, clearing the way for its rapid passage through the Dail.

ILWU, Employers Await Mediator

VANCOUVER (CP) — Both the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and British Columbian's maritime employers are waiting for word from Ottawa on possible appointment of a federal government mediator to speed up contract talks.

The employers asked for the mediator earlier this week because the talks were going too slowly, and the union broke off the talks to assess its position.

Ed Strang, chief negotiator for the employers, said a proposl for computer dispatching of longshoremen to dock jobs and amendment of a clause covering container cargo loading were two major items still outstanding.

"We haven't even talked money", he said.

Don Garcia, area president for the ILWU, agreed and said hours of work was also an important issue.

The longshoremen are working under back-to-work legislatian passed by parliament earlier this year to halt an earlier work stoppage. The legislation runs out at the end of the year.

"Our interpretation of certain clauses is that we can go on strike at midnight Dec. 31", Mr. Garcia said, but added that there are other clauses on which the union will have to get a ruling before any strike is called.

The ILWU and eight other unions, meanwhile, have formed the Pacific Maritime Council. Mr. Garcia, whose 44,000 members form the largest component of the new group, said it is hoped that the council will eventually lead to "one union in the waterfront industry."

He said the council hopes eventually to have 10,000 members. Besides the ILWU, other unions joining were the B.C. Ferry Workers Union, the Boilermakers and Marine Workers Industrial Union, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, Local 400, Seafarers International Union, International Woodworkers of America, United Brotherhood of Carpenters, Joiners and Shipwrights, Metal Trades Council and the tugboat men belonging to the Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

Buy-or-Move: Williams

VANCOUVER (CP) — Resources Minister Bob Williams was involved earlier this year in an apartment-conversion plan in which tenants were told to purchase their suites or move out, the New Democratic MLA confirmed today.

Williams was a partner in the purchase of six rental units in a city apartment block. He was an MLA when the purchase took place.

The spreading practice of converting apartment buildings into condominiums has come in for criticism recently, with Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer suggesting recently that the government will step in to regulate the conversions unless the developers do so themselves.

Lorimer, who acted as Williams' lawyer during the purchase of the suites, registered on Jan. 29 of this year, has said the government may introduce legislative amendments to block the conversions.

Williams said Lorimer acted solely as his solicitor in the purchase and had no other interest in the transaction.

The six suites were purchased by Williams and his partners—his mother, Mrs. Margaret Williams, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Noella Ringuette—for $77,000. They were sold individually for a total of $127,800 by April 25.

Williams said he had spent a lot of money in repairing and renovating the units and estimated he had spent "tens of thousands of dollars" on fixing them.

He said people were given a good chance to either buy the suites or move to other accommodation and none were evicted.

"We're very proud of it, but I wouldn't do it again," he said.

"It cost a lot."

Man. Prosecutors Eye Own Union

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Free Press today said Manitoba's 23 crown prosecutors, along woth other legal officers of the provincial government, have withdrawn from the provincial civil service and are attempting to form their own union.

In the front page story, the paper said the prosecutors and legal officers are expected to submit an application for certification to the provincial labor board early in 1973.

Attorney General Al Mackling confirmed there is a move afoot by the prosecutors to form their own union but Labor Minister A. R. Paulley says it is impossible.

Paulley said that under the terms of the Civil Service Act any group can withdraw from the Manitoba Government Employees Association, the official bargaining agent for civil servants.

However, he said, "there is no provision for the legal officers to form themseves into a separate bargaining unit."

He said the Manitoba Labor Relations Act, which comes into effect Jan. 1, 1973 and will make it easier for workers to unionize, does not cover members of the civil service.

"In effect, what has happened is that they have withdrawn from the Manitoba Government Employees Association and have left themselves in a vacuum. They're at the suffrance now of cabinet, as far as any negotiations are concerned.

"They have no legal representation under the Civil Service Act . . . they haven't got any power now."

Region Post Escapes Jubenville

Jubenville

Weldon Jubenville, the fiery former president of the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America, has lost in his attempt to become regional secretary-treasurer of the union.

"What the results of this election mean is that there will be no change in our regional council in the next two years," the 53-year-old former faller commented today.

"I don't like to see the best union in the world, the I.W.A., stand still for that long, because the way things are that means going backwards."

Jubenville said he will depart to "a warmer climate" for a month then make up his mind what to do. "I'm not planning to go back to work in a camp, but I haven't ruled out any possibility."

Results of the regional election, released Friday, show Jubenville polled 11,670 votes — but incumbent Fred Fieber, who is nearing retirement age, got 12,549 votes.

Jubenville had joined regional president Jack Moore's slate in the election, while Fieber was dumped and joined a challenging rank and file slate.

In other results, Moore polled 14,815 votes to top challenger Don Poirier who got 10,017.

Moore's slate took the first and second vice-presidencies Jack Munro (14,498) topping former Victorian Joe Fowler (9,834) and Wyman Trineer (13,190) beating Cy Godfrey (10,859).

Third vice-president Stan Parker (12,900) edged challenger Ben Thompson (11,231) of the rank and file slate.

In addition to Fieber's victory, the challenging slate also defeated Ed Haw of Victoria for the post of trustee. Haw, former long-time financial secretary of the Victoria IWA local, got 10,928 votes — but Erik Wood of the Haney local polled 13,061.

COLE BAY FIRE KILLS 2 TOTS

Two children, aged one and four years, died early this morning in a fire that gutted their parents' North Saanich home.

Pauline Tom, 1, and Sandra Tom, 4, died in the 1 a.m. blaze at 996 Paquachin Lane on the Cole Bay Indian reservation.

The two girls were found in a bedroom of the wooden frame bungalow-type home. Their six-year-old brother, Harold, had escapd by jumping from the window of his own bedroom.

The childrens' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tom escaped uninjured.

An inquiry into the children's death will be held today under coroner Gordon A. Gerrie in Sidney.

Victoria Times
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1972 13
SECOND SECTION

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The operators of the Fred Astaire Fiesta Dance Studio at 723 Fort have done a quick-step out of town, leaving a swath of bills and unfulfilled contracts behind them.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Birch left town Nov. 15 on the orders of their boss, Allen Regosin of Tucson, Ariz.

They had orders to pack everything they could use in the Tucson studio and take it with them.

Some of their clientele were told that the Birches had family problems and would have to go to Birche's home town of Spokane. They said they would be back in two weeks' time.

However, a check with the stodio's secretary confirms that the Birches had no intention of doing this. They were sent money by Regosin and promised work in Arizona.

On Regosin's orders, according to the secretary, they brought over a truck from Vancouver, filled it with tables, chairs, records and gear and headed south.

They Came for Lessons

Some of their clientele, who have paid thousands of dollars for dance lessons, only knew of the leave-taking when they appeared at the studio after the Birches had left.

The secretary said she had wanted to tell the customers that the Birches had no intention of coming back but she had been told that Regosin's man in Vancouver, identified as Ernie Thesman, would be reopening the studio in two weeks.

An employee of Thesman, when phoned, said he was "out of town, travelling" and wouldn't be back until Monday.

The secretary asks that her name not be printed because she still hopes the studio will reopen — she also hopes to get the wages still owing to her.

The name she's known by at the studio is not her real name anyhow. She explains that she was "pretty mad" when she was told she couldn't use her own name. None of the help at the studio were allowed to use their own name.

"We were told it was to stop customers bothering us at home," she reports.

Regosin also used a phony name up here. Letters to his creditors bear the signature A. Regal, the name he used for his Victoria operation.

However, a check with the provincial registrar of companies' department reveals that an Allen and Nancy (his wife) Regosin registered the FADS Holdings Ltd. on June 19, 1970, using the studio address of 723 Fort.

Statement Not Filed

The company has not fulfilled the legal requirement to file annual financial statements with the department. It has filed only one report, due June 1971, and received by the department in February of this year, according to the Better Business Bureau.

Among the outstanding bills around town is $825 for rental of the premises, owned by Montreal Trust, and $1,040.30 for advertising.

The secretary says, that the rental agent acting for Montreal Trust was also unaware that the Birchs intended to leave town.

"They owed $825 and the agent told me he had personally told Mr. Birch that nothing could be removed from the studio."

Regosin, or in this case, Regal, has told at least one of his creditors he intends to sell the Victoria company.

Told that the Times intended to contact Regosin in Tucson to check this and other facts, the secretary requested that the matter of her salary also be raised.

A telephone interview with Regosin today was brief and uninformative.

Asked, why, if he inteded to sell the business, he had the studio effects bundled off to Arizona, Regosin retorted:

"I don't have to tell you, it's none of your business."

He gave the same answer when he was asked if he intends to honor his customers' accounts and why he didn't use his real name for the Victoria operation.

Customers Embarrassed

All the studio's customers contacted asked that their names not be used because they were embarrased or didn't want to appear stupid in front of their friends.

One woman, who said she "wouldn't like her daughter to know how foolish she had been' said she was luckier than most. She had only paid "between $5,000 and $6,000" because she had refused to sign a contract.

Asked if money was ever refunded to those who had signed contracts, the secretary said the contract didn't allow for refunds unless the customer could produce a signed statement by his or her doctor, saying they were physically incapable of taking the lessons.

She also said that there was a stipulation that any such refunds be given to an "assigned charitable organization" rather than the individual.

Some of the studio's customers have overcome their temerity and lodged complaints with the Better Business Bureau.

Licence No Protection

Managing director Bill Tindall says that, of these, the amounts involved range from $842 to $8,051.

He said the problem of recovering money spent for services not received would be difficult if, as he believed, FADS Holdings Ltd. handled its own financing or used a finance company in the United States.

Tindall said "The unfortunate thing is that many of these people are very reluctant to come forward because they feel embarassed."

Tindall, a city alderman, says that lack of teeth in legislation contributes to the danger of innocent people getting hurt.

"We're sadly lacking at the local level when it comes to granting trade licenses. Basically, it's a revenue-producing department and there is little protection for the taxpayer at that level. We should have power to require bonding, proof of qualifications and financial statements."

Tindall says municipalities do not have this power under the Municipal Act.

"The only way we can cure this situation is at the provincial level," he says.

The Collector

Sidney Firechief Rejected

Sidney firemen say they cannot accept the appointment made by town council this week of a Central Saanich man as Sidney's first paid fire chief.

"We have nothing against Don Facey, the appinted chief, as a person," said Bill Mason, president of Sidney Firemen's Association. "We are concerned, however, about the manner in which he was hired."

According to Mason, the council is bound by its own bylaw to ask the fire wardens' committee for recommendations on hiring and firing by department personnel.

Although the association was aware of the position being advertised, said Mason, there was no attempt made by council to consult the fire wardens' committee on the hiring of a chief.

The fire wardens' committee contains two representatives of the Firemens' Association.

Facey, former chief of Central Saanich fire department, was picked from 20 applicants at an in-camera meeting of Sidney Council Monday.

Mason said the association had notified facey of their reaction.

Mayor Stan Dear said after an emergency meeting of council Friday night that he would make no comment on the matter at this time.

Questioned this morning, Facey refused to comment on the firemens' position.

Frampton Seeks Municipal Probe

Victoria Ald. Percy Frampton sent a letter Friday to the provincial Inspector of Municipalities, asking him to investigate allegations that Mayor Peter Pollen "has been involved in transactions which may be contrary to the Municipal Act."

Frampton says as senior alderman he has viewed the charges "with some concern," particularly those concerning Pollen's involvement in leasing the Simon Leiser Building on Yates Street to the Capital Region District board, and sales of vehicles to the city by the Peter Pollen Ford Company.

"If these charges are untrue, then I would like to clear the name of Mayor Pollen and the city of Victoria," Frampton states.

"If the charges are true, then I trust that you, as the Inspector of Municipalities, would take whatever action was necessary."

Frampton, as an alternate director on the regional board, says that meanwhile the municipal affairs department should not approve the new lease on the Simon Leiser Building "until you have fully ascertained the validity, or otherwise, of the actions leading up to the drawing of the lease."

The specific allegations mentioned in the letter are among five raised Tuesday by lawyer Ian Stewart, following statements by Pollen concerning himself and his land dealings in James Bay at the time Stewart was an alderman.

Pollen answered the charges at a press conference Thursday, denying he had acted improperly.

He said his firm had engaged in transactions with the city while he was an alderman, but he had made "full disclosure" at the time and complied with requirements of the Municipal Act.

On the Simon Leiser Building, Pollen said it was owned by a non-profit foundation of which he was a member but that he had no personal interest in the lease or the building.

16% Raise for Firemen

Victoria firemen will receive nearly a 16 per cent wage increase over 21 months in a new contract recommended for approval by Victoria city council Friday.

In releasing the details of the wage settlement today, Fred (Whitey) Severson, president of local 730 of the Victoria Fire Fighters Union, said Victoria firemen will still receive $30 a month less than their Vancouver counterparts.

The contract includes a 6.89 per cent increase for the last nine months of 1972, a 7 per cent increase for the first 10 months of 1973 and an additional 1.3 per cent increase on Nov. 1, 1973.

The increase will bring the basic rate for a first class firefighter to $950 a month.

Additional benefits in the new contract, which is retroactive to April, 1972, include a service pay increase of $5 a month after five years of service; an overtime clause which calls for time-and-a-half in wages for overtime; and agreement on an in-service training program.

Mayor Peter Pollen said today city council agreed to recommend acceptance of the new contract at an unscheduled meeting Friday afternoon following a meeting of the four core municipalities which discussed joint bargaining.

Pollen declined to comment on the earlier meeting, saying only that is was "productive" but no agreement on regional bargaining of municipal contracts was made.

The idea of joint regional bargaining has been considered by the core municipalifies for several years.

Severson said the union, which met with city negotiators a total of 17 times over the eight-month bargaining period, had ratified the new contract last week.

City council responded to the proposed contract last Monday however, by calling for the joint municipal meeting to reintroduce discussions of regional bargaining.

"After discussing this with the other municipalities," Pollen said, "the council decided the best thing to do was recommend approving the new contract."

Pollen said the contract would probably be officially approved at the next regular city council meeting.

30 Cents Per Hour For School Trustees

School trustees receive about 30 cents an hour for their work, incumbent trustee Walter Donald told an all-candidates meeting Thursday night.

"I think the public's getting a pretty good bargain," he said, citing over 150 school board meetings throughout the year.

Donald said he was running for the board because he was concerned about students who are getting "turned off" with school.

He added he was also interested in improving both communications between teachers and trustees and the student-teacher ratio.

HOSPITAL VOTE STILL ON

The chairman of the capital regional hospital board said today he has no knowledge of provincial government plans to shelve a $22 million building referendum planned for next March.

Art Young was responding to a Colonist story today which said the province will delay the referendum and has asked for a review of figures to produce the proposed spending totals.

The referendum will seek regional ratepayers' approval to bring up to date acute care facilities, mostly at Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals.

Voters will be asked to approve long-term borrowing for 40 per cent of the cost, with the province paying the balance.

Young said that discussions with the government so far have indicated it is agreeable to the March referendum provided the spending proposals put before the voters are flexible.

"If we can't go to referendum," said Young, "the government must provide some interim financing because we just can't wait any longer for acute care needs."

Pilgrimage to Victoria the Beautiful

WHEN WE LIVED IN VICTORIA, our idea of a holdiay was to get out of the city. Now the situation is reversed. As country dwellers perched above an up-Island beach, we point our car south when a change of scene is indicated.

Last week brought one of those occasions. We convinced ourselves that the city could best supply some of the items on our list of needs and wants. A pocket-sized bird book, for instance, with really good color plates. Short rubber boots of a particular type and make to replace the pair I wore out on the beaches.

There was Christmas shopping to be done, and it would be just as well if we got after it early. And anyway, we wanted a trip.

By happy coincidence, a cheque for a magazine article turned up in our mail. Prudence dictated that we squirrel this sending away, and we deliberated for all of 10 seconds. Then, with minimum of further delay, we started off down the Island Highway.

The creeks that were showing their bones when we last drove south — Cougar, Rosewall, Waterloo and the rest — hustled under their bridges with a strong brown flow. Deciduous trees that had fluanted bright colors in the earlier fall now stood bare, and occasional highway signs carried wintry warnings about snow plows and snow tires chains and sanding trucks.

But winter, we hoped, was still a southeaster or two distant, and we wound down off the Malahat in soft grey weather.

When we lived in Victoria, we took the city pretty much for granted. Coming in as visitors, we found our impressions sharpened.

Here was a city of quality — beautiful, very clean, and much larger than we'd realized. Whether by good luck or good planning or a combination of both, it has escaped the lamentable clutter, the look of being flung down all in a heap to grow any old way, which marks so many North American centres.

(From our years as residents, I'm also aware that Victoria owes much to the unparalleled ferocity of its inhabitants when they feel that their amenities are threatened. If Vancouver in its formative years had been blessed with such zealous watchdogs, Big Smoky mightn't be the ill-planned mess it is today.)

As visitors, however, we soon became keenly aware that downtown Victoria has one lack which should be remedied while time remains.

It needs pedestrian malls in its core, and should set about getting them even at the cost of more city-operated parking garages and a re-arranged downtown traffic pattern.

So to our shopping, an endeavor at which I do not shine. Men in general lack the stamina and the specialized hunting instinct that women bring to a day of store-hopping.

We did Douglas Street. ("Why don't you put the little bags in the big bag?" my dear one suggested. "That way, you won't be so likely to lose anything.")

We did Government Street, also Yates and Fort. ("No, it's too soon to stop for coffee. Don't tell me you're tired already!")

Part of the answer, I suspect, is that shopping possesses therapeutic values for a woman that it lacks for a man. This thought occurred to me while I hefted a nice little chain saw with interest but no present intent.

The chain saw is one of the items on our someday list, a compilatin that has acquired a healthy length. Come to think of it, a reasonable gap between wanting and getting exercises a therapy of its own. . .

"You do keep straying," Win said cheerfully from behind me. "Let's have that coffee now. Then we'll go look for your rubber boots."

We are home again from a junket which is a seasonal rite for many up-Islanders — so many, in fact, that they provide Victoria with a lucrative sub-tourist trade. We made a considerable dint in our Chirstmas shopping, and I'm glad to report that all's well with the bird book.

This country cousin absentmindedly left it on the store counter after checking the life-style of the redthroated loon, but it turned up safe in our mailbox the other moning.

NEW ADMINISTRATOR of business for the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria is 34-year-old Allen Houghton, former Ontario newspaper publisher. The new position was created after art gallery attendance in Victoria rose 30 per cent last year.

Nicholson 'Satisfactory'

Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson will probably be released Sunday from St. Paul's Hospital, Vancouver, a hospital spokesman said today. Nicholson entered hospital Monday night after collapsing with a lung infection at a private dinner. He is now in satisfactory condition.

FCS Directors Vote To Open Meetings

The board of directors of the Family and Children's Service has voted to open meetings to the public for a six-month trial period.

A statement from executive director Gordon Wright says the board believes the public should have the opportunity to know more about the $3 million porgram of social services it operates in Greater Victoria.

These include neighborhood family counselling and child welfare teams, foster care and adoption programs, group homes, residential treatment services, day care centres and homes and intensive services for delinquent youth.

The service's operating funds come from the federal and provincial governments.

Board meetins are usually held on the fourth Monday of each month at 1627 Fort, starting at 7:30 p.m. This month the meeting will be held Dec. 18 at the same location and time.
